Trotzky Shakes Mailed Fist at Britain

FRANCO-RUSS PACT HINTED IN SPEECH BY WAR MINISTER

"Airplanes and More Airplanes" Offered as Answer to Ultimatums; Lord Curzon Scored.

BOURGOISIE PLANS DECLARED 'IN PIECES'

Possibility of Gigantic Revolutionary Upheaval Held as Cause for Agitation in England.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Moscow, June 19.—An attack on England, hints of a Russo-French rapprochement and a plea for "more metal in our national character," marked an address by Leon Trotzky, soviet war minister, today, before the all-Russian congress of metal workers.

"If an ultimatum is presented to us," he exclaimed, referring to the recent British notes, "let us create a detachment of airplanes. If a coup d'etat occurs in Bulgaria, let us build another detachment of airplanes, and if there is a coup d'etat in Persia, build more airplanes.

"The iron in our will must be transferred to the iron wings of airplanes; then we can say, looking high above at our squadrons, 'this is the coup d'etat in Persia'—and so on. If we transform the criminalities on the bourgeoisie into airplanes, then perhaps we shall be able sometime to bring an end of their criminalities."

Assisted in Bulgarian Coup.

M. Trotzky said England and Italy had, according to information at hand, assisted in the coup d'etat in Bulgaria and the British had aided in the nationalist overthrow in Persia. Declaring that Russia's losses in the world war were overwhelmingly greater than Britain's, Trotzky added:

"It was for this purpose, perhaps, that Lord Curzon felt strong enough to deliver us his ten-day ultimatum. It was necessary that the blood of the Russian workers and peasants be shed. This account some day we shall present to the English bourgeoise.

"England remains true to her traditional policy. In the international war her role was also dictated by her international policy. In reality hers was a provacative role. When the English proletariat opens the safes of the English diplomacy, the records will, if they are not already destroyed, show the real role of England in the world war.

"It is the same in regard to the Ruhr—if England had not wished France to do so, there would have been no Ruhr occupation. To bring two peoples into struggle while the rest aside themselves, in order to be able to appropriate the results, is the traditional policy of the English bourgeoise."

Saved From "Trap."

Russia, by yielding, saved herself from falling into Lord Curzon's trap, Trotzky said, finally forcing the idea into the souls of the British bourgeoise that Russia wanted peace.

"We have seen the English souls," he said. "They are good thick, heavy leather souls. From such leather are built the skulls of the English philis-

The Two Brides

It is an old notion in some parts of Europe for a girl to make an enormous cheese and bury it. This is her wedding portion when she marries. It is her token of co-operation.

The American bride's token is her discrimination and thrift — and a chief source of her economy is the Want-ad columns.

DAUGHTER'S PLEA SAVES FATHER FROM GALLOWS

Chicago, June 19.—On the plea of his 16-year-old daughter that he be spared the gallows, Ignatz Fuchs, who shot and killed his wife, Anna, during a drunken quarrel, was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge George Kersten in criminal court this morning. The daughter, Cecelia, who witnessed the shooting of her mother, plead with the court not to impose the death penalty.

ATLANTANS URGED TO OFFER ROOMS TO VISITING ELKS

Accommodations Will Be Needed for Minimum of 10,000 Delegates During Convention in July.

Prominent citizens and civic organization leaders met Tuesday at the Ansley with the special emergency housing committee of the 1923 convention board of the Elks' lodge to devise ways and means to secure accommodations in the better class homes of Atlanta for several thousand members of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, who will attend the fifty-ninth grand lodge reunion and convention, to be held July 9-14.

Among those attending the luncheon and taking part in the general discussion were F. J. Paxon, chairman of the convention bureau; Secretary B. S. Barker, of the chamber of commerce; Francis W. Clarke, managing editor The Constitution; John Paschal, managing editor The Journal; James B. Nevin, editor The Georgian; W. T. Perkerson, vice president Fourth National bank; George M. Hope, commissioner of roads and revenues of Fulton county; Walter P. Andrews, B. C. Broyles, Sam C. Little, C. Armond Carroll and B. H. Johnson, of the Elks' lodge.

Judge L. F. McClelland, exalted ruler of Atlanta lodge, B. P. O. E., and John S. McClelland, general chairman of the convention board, were hosts of the luncheon, as members of the emergency housing committee. Chairman John S. McClelland presided.

Need Thousands of Rooms.

In stating the critical situation that faces the Elks as prospective hosts of the biggest convention that has ever been held in the south, Chairman John S. McClelland said that despite repeated efforts to arouse the interest of the Atlanta people in the fact that rooms must be found for a minimum of 10,000, and perhaps 20,000 Elks

BOARD SUSPENDS OFFICER CARROLL

County Police Lieutenant Found Guilty of "Malicious Arrest" After Search of Automobile.

On complaint of Mat Griffin and T. C. Wright, two well-known young Atlantans, Lieutenant A. J. Carroll, of the county police force, Friday was suspended for 15 days after the police committee of the board of commissioners found him guilty of "malicious arrest." Officers Frank Donehoo and Arthur Atkinson were exonerated of similar charges growing out of the same arrest.

Griffin made the complaint to the county authorities. He alleges that while riding in an automobile with Wright out Mayson-Turner road the three officers stopped them and searched their machine for whisky without a warrant.

According to Griffin, the lieutenant demanded that he open a rear compartment to his machine. He said he informed Lieutenant Atkinson and his companions that the compartment contained no liquor. The officers then pried open the compartment, he stated, and no whisky was found.

Griffin declared that when he raised his hand to signal a passing automobile Carroll ordered the other two officers to handcuff him and his companions. They were then taken to Fulton tower and detained illegally, according to the complaint.

Griffin asked that the policemen be "subjected to such discipline as will prevent repetition of such outrageous acts in the future."

You may eat as you arrive and lose little time.

"W. D. BELL, Mayor.

"THE BOARD OF TRADE."

This late hour communication from Georgia's new county of Comer was verified by long distance telephone and accepted by The Constitution for the party, which will leave Augusta at an early hour Thursday morning for a two hours' drive to Sardis where this feast will be ready for serving.

The Constitution's personally conducted automobile tour to Tybee, for the three-day gala celebration of the opening of the Tybee Motor road, leaves Atlanta at 7 o'clock this morning from the Georgian Terrace hotel.

Thirty-eight cars will compose the caravan, which is possibly the largest ever to make a Georgia tour. Stops will be made in Greensboro and Thomson before reaching Augusta this evening. Greensboro is providing a big free barbecue in typical Green county style. After partaking of this feast the party will make a short stop in Thomson for refreshments and move on to Augusta, where an evening's entertainment awaits the party.

Thursday stops will be made for a few minutes in Waynesboro and Sylvania for refreshments and rest period. Ladies will be present at all cities where stops are made to assist in entertaining the feminine members of The Constitution's party.

Upon reaching Savannah the party will register at the De Soto hotel, which will be official headquarters, and then go to Tybee in their own individual party, escorted by Savannah and Tybee citizens.

Harding Leaves Today on Trip Over Continent

Alaska, Never Before Visited by a President, Goal of Journey.

Washington, June 19.—President Harding will leave Washington shortly after noon tomorrow on the longest trip of his administration—a trip that will take him across the continent, to Alaska, into Canada, along the Pacific coast, to the Panama canal zone and to Porto Rico, and will keep him away from the capital for at least two months.

The vast territory of Alaska, never before visited by a president, is Mr. Harding's goal. Long before he was even mentioned for the presidency he came under "the spell of the Yukon" and since entering the white house he has had the dream of being able to visit the territory and study at first the problems which have arisen there in so great a number.

Capt. W. H. H. Phelps to Spend Last Days in Soldiers' Home

SPENT FORTUNE FOR SOUTH DURING CIVIL WAR

Captain W. H. H. Phelps with sword he wore during stirring days of sixties.

Hero of Sixties Recalls Battles of Days Gone by and Tells of Stirring Times in Columbus.

Phantom Legions Seen by Veterans at Soldiers' Home as They Dream of Lee and Jackson.

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

Captain William H. H. Phelps, who raised two famous southern fighting units during the civil war, and who spent his own personal fortune in the cause of the Confederacy, is today an inmate of the Old Soldiers' home.

The companies he raised were forced to equip from his own resources, and his wife, who accompanied her husband on the campaigns, was the whole red cross establishment for the units under her husband's command, until the order came that camp followers were no longer allowed. From the beginning of the war until the very end Captain Phelps was loyal to the cause in so far that he not only volunteered for service but sacrificed his business and all he had in the world.

Incidentally Captain Phelps was one of the last men to sheathe his sword in the war between the states and his wife is the only woman, whose name is immortalized in the records of the nation, by one of the crack outfits of the Confederate army that bore her name, the Lula guards.

Tells Story of Life.

Captain Phelps has been in ill health for some time. He is 85 years old and has outlived all his relatives. Tuesday afternoon he told the story of his life and of the civil war, seated in an armchair in front of the hospital of the Old Soldiers' home. With an accuracy that speaks of an exceptionally clear mind, one that is uncommon in a man of his age, he remembered dates and places of that eventual time as if he had visited them but yesterday.

He described the personalities of the great leaders as he had known them

The first chips were chiseled off the face of Stone Mountain on Monday. A memorial of everlasting granite is going to be created to tell countless generations to come of the heroism and steadfastness of the south, for the ranks of the men who played a prominent part in the stirring events of the civil war are thinning each year. The time will come when their voices are silenced for ever. There are a handful of the old boys left at the Soldiers' home. Slowly and peacefully the eventide of life is ebbing away for the Confederate veterans in that institution.

There on the shaded porches of the pavilions and on the cool lawns of green, the old boys, who wore the gray, sit and talk and dream. Now and again the wind carries over to them the noise and turmoil of metropolitan life, but it is as if the sounds penetrate from another world. For here peace has come to reign. Here the battle of life is drawing to a close and the end of a perfect day is in sight. Hundreds of sweet warblers break the afternoon's stillness with their melodies. A rustle passes through the dense foliage as the breeze whispers through the trees.

An Idyllic Spot.

Serene is the atmosphere and idyllic the spot. The old men with their silvery hair and flowing beards sit in a circle. They talk over the battles of another day. They rehearse the details and compare individual versions of different battles of the war—the only war in so far they are concerned. The Old Soldiers' home becomes a treasure house of pathos and heroism, of chivalry and indestructible glory.

Under a hanging cypress tree his hands rested on his cane sits a veter-

2,606,300 PAIRS OF TRENCH SHOES SOLD GEORGIA FIRM

Washington, June 19.—(Special.) The director of sales of the war department today announced the sale of 2,606,300 pairs of unused army trench shoes to the Georgia Wholesale Grocery company, of Jackson, Ga.

The Georgia company's bid of $1.57 5-8 per pair for the entire lot was the highest bid received among those submitted on June 15. Other bids ranged from $1.11.

The award is one of the largest made of shoes since the war department commenced disposing of its war-time surplus stocks.

CONVICT STEALS PLOW FROM FARM TO BUY TOBACCO

Savannah, Ga., June 19.—(Special.) The record of stealing a piano from a prominent church in the broad daylight some months ago here was rivaled here today when John Warner, sent to the county farm for a term of six months for larceny, was rearrested on a charge of stealing a plow and plowstock from the county convict farm to sell in order to obtain money with which to buy cigarettes to last him through his original sentence.

PROPOSAL TO SELL SCHOOL PROPERTY WILL CAUSE FIGHT

Councilman Harry York Says That He Will Ask Council to Take Action Preventing Sale.

URGES $550,000 BONDS FOR TWO NEW SCHOOLS

York Says If City Will Keep Property, Value Will Increase 10 Times Within Five Years.

Efforts to have city council prevent the sale of any of the city owned property which the board of education plans to dispose of at public auction on June 25 in order that an additional $500,000 might be raised for completing work on the two senior high schools, will be made by Councilman Harry York at the special meeting of council Thursday afternoon.

Councilman York announced Tuesday that he would introduce two resolutions in council, one providing that a special school bond issue for $550,000 be floated, the funds to be used in completing the two high school buildings and in eliminating fire hazard conditions at all schools recommended for repair by the special committee.

Increase of Costs.

The other resolution will provide that costs in recorders court be increased from $1 to $3 in each case which would enable the city to raise approximately $50,000 within the next six months to be used in replacing the amount anticipated by the education board from the Joseph M. Brown property recently transfered from the schools to the parks departments.

"The city will be making a huge mistake," declared Councilman York, "if it permits all the abandoned school property to be sold at this time. Local real estate is going up at tremendous strides. By holding on to all this property for the next five years the city can realize ten times as much for it as it can be sold for now."

"My plans are to issue bonds to the amount of $550,000 with which to take care of the erection of the senior high school buildings, and expend the remainder on eliminating fire hazard conditions at the schools that so urgently need improving.

Can Raise $50,000.

"By increasing recorder's court costs from $1 to $3 we can raise approximately $50,000 during the next six months which can be used in paying the board of education the equivalent of the Joseph M. Brown property, and for carrying out the recommendations of the special committee investigating the Girls' High school and other schools for existing perils."

Contracts for the building of the new Girls' senior high school cannot be awarded as a result of council's action in taking the Brown property away from the education board, it was stated by members of the board Tuesday. Unless council at its special session Thursday afternoon appropriates an amount necessary to insure letting of the Girl's High contract, the board of education is powerless to make a move, it was declared by W. A. Hancock, member of the board.

'Lion of Argonne' To Be Honored By U.S. Veterans

Rainbow Division to Have Distinguished French General as Guest.

New York, June 19.—General Gouraud, of the French army, "the Lion of the Argonne," will arrive on the France, June 30, to be the guest of the Rainbow division during a six-weeks' tour of the United States, it was announced tonight.

He will be the guest of honor at the convention of Rainbow veterans at Indianapolis, July 13 to 15, marking the fifth anniversary of the champaign defense in July, 1918, in which the Rainbow division fought with the fourth French army under General Gouraud, successfully checking the German advance upon Paris.

His itinerary includes a visit to Macon, Ga.

DENVER SOCIETY WOMAN CHARGED AS DRY VIOLATOR

Denver, Colo., June 19.—Mrs. Katherine O'Connor, Denver society woman, and daughter of J. K. Mullen, Denver millionaire, surrendered this morning to United States Marshal William A. Dollison on a charge of conspiracy to violate a section of the national prohibition law and was put under a bond of $1,500 for appearance in federal court June 22 to plead.

BRITAIN MARKING TIME ON QUESTION OF REPARATIONS

Awaiting Receipt of French and Belgian Answer to Request for More Definite Information.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

London, June 19.—The British government is marking time on the reparation question until receipt of the French and Belgian answer to foreign Secretary Curzon's memorandum asking France to define her attitude more precisely.

This information was to have been presented to Lord Curzon today but up to early afternoon neither the French nor Belgian ambassador had asked for an appointment with the foreign secretary. It is assumed that the Belgian cabinet situation is delaying presentation of the reply.

In fact, in authoritative circles there is a distinct air of pessimism, since France has given no indication of an intention to modify either her idea regarding the amount Germany shall pay or her determination to continue the progressively intensive military occupation.

NO TRACE FOUND OF STAMBOULISKY

Body of Former Bulgarian 'Peasant Premier' Mysteriously Disappears; Coup d'etat Ended.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

London, June 19.—A special dispatch to the Times from Slavovitza, Bulgaria, dated June 18 and sent by way of Sofia, says no trace had been found of the body of Former Premier Stamboulisky, who was shot and killed last week and that it is probable friends carried it away and buried it secretly.

The dispatch adds that Stamboulisky's villa was completely pillaged by peasants in a veritable treasure hunt. Daily fresh discoveries were being made of Bulgarian and foreign paper money, and undoubtedly, according to the correspondent, Stamboulisky in true peasant fashion, had hoarded enormous sums.

The Sofia correspondent of the Times says the entire country is quiet and that the coup d'etat, with its immediate consequences, may be considered as ended.

SHORT $170,000 IN TRUST FUNDS; TREASURER HELD

Harrisburg, Pa., June 19.—Discovery of a shortage of $170,000 in trust funds of the Waynesboro Trust company, Waynesboro, was reported today by Secretary of Banking Peter G. Cameron. Secretary Cameron announced he had ordered the arrest of Charles H. Coover, treasurer.

Matrimonial Mind Of London Wouldbe Brides Changeable

London, June 19.—Three thousand fickle London women changed their minds last year and decided against matrimony after the marriage licenses had been issued and all preparations made for the ceremony.

These figures, obtained from registrar's offices, establish a record.

Incompatibility of temperament was the favorite excuse the "Near-Brides" offered for breaking their contract.

Last minute tiffs caused many to back out. Others got cold feet when they saw the officials looking over marriage documents. Several left their bridegroms waiting at the church.

Only in rare cases do men change their minds, the records show.

FLAMING STREAMS SPREADING DEATH OVER RICH AREAS

King of Italy Leaves for Sicily — Pope Places Churches at Disposal of Refugee Thousands.

SIX MOUTHS POUR FLAMES FROM VOLCANO

Incandescent Rocks Weighing Tons Hurled Into City of Giarre—Red Cross Mobilized.

Rome, June 19.—King Victor Emmanuel has left for Naples, proceeding by warship to Cantania to lead the battle to save Sicilian cities from the avalanche of lava streams.

Two more cities have been wiped out in the inferno of flame and destruction bursting from Mt. Etna. Six mouths are now vomiting out incandescent lava upon the doomed valleys.

Pope Pius XI has directed Cardinal Francisanava to Catania to keep him constantly informed of the situation, and to place all churches and religious buildings throughout Sicily at disposal of the refugees. More than 50,000 refugees are now huddled in Catania alone.

The eruption continues amid terrific earth shocks and flaming lava flows. A funeral pall of volcanic smoke hangs over all Sicily, centering on the cauldron of the burning mountain.

Senator Ciraolo has mobilized several units of Red Cross for dispatch to Siciliy.

Situation Unchanged.

An official communique from the ministry of the interior says:

"The situation is unchanged. The advance of lava has been retarded except in the zone surrounding the railroad station at Castiglione, according to latest advices. Within a few hours the station will be engulfed.

"In other directions the push of lava is slower but danger of destruction of rich farms, farm houses and villas still is grave. The prefect of Catania has returned to the threatened zone, distributing relief. Minister Carnazza will inform us concerning needs. Carnazza also has been empowered to take measures to alleviate distress of the suffering refugees."

Terrifying Spectacle.

Catania, June 19.—Mt. Etna presented a monstrous and terrifying spectacle Tuesday evening.

Six fiery mouths, one of them 1,700 feet wide, roared into the night. About this crown of fire lay a 1,000-yard ribbon of white-hot ashes. From the glaring summit radial streams of smoking lava wound snake-like into the valleys.

One of the hugest streams swept toward Giarre where 20,000 people had hurriedly begun the evacuation of their doomed city. It had already wiped out the villages of Germinara and Casanica in its path.

On the crest of the lava wave rode incandescent rocks weighing tons. From time to time these were hurled out from the pouring avalanche, crashing before it. Under the smoke clouds the countryside wilted in furnace heat. Showers of small stones lay two and three inches deep over the devastated zone.

Behind Linguaiossa the bulk of two extinct volcanic peaks gave hope that the lava streams would be deflected from the city. The railroad station there, however, was already doomed.

While fragments of solid lava fell as far as 30 miles from the crater, inhabitants of towns on the mountain slope were frantically digging trenches to break the course of lava streams.

Pray As Bells Ring.

Religious processions were formed in many towns. The entire population of Piedemonte had camped all night in the public square of the city, clustering about the wooden statue of St. Anthony and praying as church bells incessantly rang.

Occasional earth shocks brought new terror to the frantic multitudes.

Catania is housing 50,000 refugees. New throngs pour in hourly, a wierd cavalcade of families struggling on foot or clustering like flies on army trucks, private automobiles and farm wagons. Through the block of traffic farmers drive their cattle, mules, horses and goats ahead of them, the animals maddened by heat and thirst. The terrific heat has dried up all wells for miles about, and refugees arriving clamor for water.

Minister of the Interior Carnazza has reached here, and has motored to the menaced district to superintend relief.

ROOMS NEEDED FOR VISITING ELKS

visitors, responses to appeals for rooms of the better class have been coming in so slowly, up to date, that a real emergency faces the convention board in its responsibility of finding sufficient lodgings of available kind to house all the visitors.

"Indications given us by figures sent out from national headquarters are that this will be the largest crowd that has ever gathered at a grand lodge reunion," Mr. McClelland stated. He then said that average figures for the past four years show a normal attendance of 34,000. This is the number of registered Elks visitors, he declared, and the figures do not take into account the non-Elks visitors to the city. The estimated number of visitors to the Atlanta convention has been conservatively set at 50,000, with a possible increase to 75,000.

In stating the need for better class rooms in the city, Mr. McClelland explained that while accommodations have been secured in the hotels for perhaps 6,000 people, with others to be cared for in Pullman cars, and in the camp at Lakewood park, between 10,000 and 20,000 people will have to be quartered in rooms in residences in Atlanta.

Praises Hotel Men.

Mr. McClelland paid a tribute to the patriotism of the Atlanta hotel men, saying that they had co-operated with the convention board wherever possible, and that they had shown the proper spirit by refusing to boost their rates to exorbitant figures. He declared that this had not been universally true with private residences and boarding houses, however, and related incidents in which people offering rooms had attempted to list them with the hotels and housing committee, charging as much as $5 per day, each person or $10 per diem for two people in a room, which rates, he declared, were greater than those demanded by the best hotels. This spirit of extortion, said he, would not be encouraged, and it was later agreed among the group attending the luncheon that $3 per day for single persons would be about the proper rate, with a rate of $5 per room for two persons. Mr. McClelland urged every citizen who has a vacant or spare room that can be used for convention visitors to get into communication immediately with the emergency committee by mail, addressing their letters to Rooms 24-26 Peachtree Arcade building, stating location, conveniences and prices. The rooms rented to convention visitors will be paid for, he said, by the guests occupying them.

Speaking briefly on the matter of finding rooms for the visitors, Mr. Paxon said that his organization would co-operate with the Elks in every way to secure the rooms for the visitors, and he suggested that personal appeals be made to citizens through an intensive canvass.

Chamber Offers Aid.

Secretary Barker, of the chamber of commerce, also proffered the co-operation of his organization, saying that this body would give every aid in putting over the same kind of canvass that is being made by the Atlanta Woman's club, which is expected to produce great results.

Mr. Nevin said that the spirit of pride among the Atlanta people had not become thoroughly aroused because of the fact that they had not come to a proper understanding of the great size of the convention that was to meet here. He said that Atlanta has only about 30,000 homes, and that less than 10,000 of these are of the class available for entertainment of the visiting Elks. Mr. Nevin said that the special publicity that has been conducted for some time should be supplemented by appeals in the newspapers.

Mr. Clarke said that in addition to the publicity campaign which he declared should be pushed vigorously, the Elks should make a personal canvass of the better class citizens. He proffered the aid of The Constitution in an intensive campaign to meet the great emergency.

Publicity Is Urged.

A brief talk was made by Mr. Paschal in which he stated that appeals to the pride and patriotism of the Atlanta people should be made through special box stories and editorials in the front page columns of the papers. Mr. Paschal added that he favored the personal appeal as a most effective manner of producing results in the room-finding campaign.

Others speaking briefly along the same general lines were Mr. Andrews, E. C. Broyles, secretary of the Atlanta lodge; B. H. Johnson, chairman of the barbecue committee, and others.

The consensus of opinions among those present was that immediate steps should be taken to impress upon the people of Atlanta the emergency that exists because of the shortage of rooms, and that efforts should be made through the press and through intensive personal canvass of civic bodies as well as individuals to arouse the spirit of patriotism in order that Atlanta's reputation as a hospitable city, and as a convention center might not be jeopardized by any failure upon the part of the people to provide the kind of entertainment that the members of this great civic and fraternal organization have received in other cities.

MITCHELL ST. STORES DAMAGED BY FLAMES

Fire last night damaged the stores of H. A. Blondheim, 40 Mitchell street, and the Crown Tailors, 38 Mitchell street, to the extent of several thousand dollars. Several hundred persons gathered around the scene of the blaze, which occurred early in the night.

H. A. Blondheim placed the damage to his store, in which the fire originated, at $3,500, while E. P. Epstein, owner of the Crown Tailors establishment, would not estimate the damage until insurance adjusters have made their survey.

Five fire companies responded to the alarm and extinguished the blaze without difficulty.

The damage to the clothing store was caused mostly by water and smoke. The printing establishment, which is on the second floor, was not damaged so far as could be learned.

SUPERANNUATED PREACHER WEDS WOMAN AT CECIL

Valdosta, Ga., June 19.—(Special) A wedding of unusual interest in this section was that of Rev. Wells, a superannuated Methodist minister and Mrs. Lola Hutchinson Edwards, of Cecil, which occurred at Cecil, Ga., last evening. The marriage of this couple was quite a surprise to their friends. The groom is seventy-eight years old and the bride some years younger.

tines, which one has to beat with a hammer for a long time."

Russia, he asserted had again entered an alarming period in which threatened many complications similar to the British ultimatum and perhaps more serious.

In regard to a rapprochement with France the war minister said some of the members of the French left and the petit bourgeoise had told him they admired the red army and thought that, if France were threatened with danger, it would be good to have such an army at the side of the French forces.

Soviet Diplomacy.

Trotzky declared that the soviet diplomacy had torn to pieces the whole fabric of the Bourgoisie plans and that Russia had again gained a certain respite for a short period at least. No full guarantee of peace was yet in sight, however. There still remained the possibility of a gigantic revolutionary upheaval in the east and it was this that agitated England.

The British were greatly worried, he declared, over the soviet's new plan of giving further autonomy to the Russians dependencies in the east, where, for example, Bokhara and Turkestain would soon have their own national armies.

"By this," he added, "we guarantee the inner strength of the republic, and the fighting ability of the Red army and at the same time, without imperialism in the colonial countries."

Soviet Russia would gradually change to the militia system, the war minister said, retaining one-fifth of the permanent army as a skeleton organization, while the remainder would be made up of workmen and peasants, who would be in training only part of the time.

Five Men Buried Alive Under Coal Bin in Waycross

Waycross, Ga., June 19.—Five men were buried alive and seriously injured last night when a giant coal bin, containing several hundred tons of coal, collapsed under a coal train driven by Engineer Sanford Cliett, of Waycross, and Fireman C. R. Griffin, of Thomasville. Three negroes buried with the trainmen were Charlie Cleckley, J. W. Huff and Ed Sanford.

Heroic efforts by a rescue crew directed by all local officials of the road who were on the scene, succeeded in releasing every man within five hours. Engineer Cliett underwent an operation at the local railroad hospital for the amputation of a leg and Fireman Griffin sustained a fractured thigh and shoulder blade. Engineer Cliett was dug out just in time to prevent suffocation.

The other victims of the accident all suffered broken bones, and it is feared that Fireman Griffin has been injured internally.

For five hours 300 fellow-workers in the local shops made frantic efforts to extricate their buried comrades. Speaking only in whispers, the rescue crews grimly stuck to their task through the long hours of the night, as little by little the great pile of coal dimin shed and the groans of their buried comrades reached their ears from under the black heap.

Victims Are Found.

Shortly before midnight the first of the buried victims was found, he was one of the negro laborers, and a few moments later Engineer Cliett was uncovered. Pinned under a huge beam, the engineer showed remarkable fortitude, with two hypodermic shots in him, but refusing a third, he sat and calmly smoked a cigarette while the men around him cut with blow torches through the steel that pinned him down.

Shortly after midnight the last of the men were removed from the scene of the accident.

One of the negroes is said to have got to his feet after having been buried for five or six hours and protested that he was able to walk home.

The few witnesses to the accident declare that the engine had been backed under the chute and the engineer and firman had left the engine and had joind a party of laborers centrally located under the chute at the time of the crash. One member of the crew had left the gondola only a few seconds before the accident to go after a drink of water.

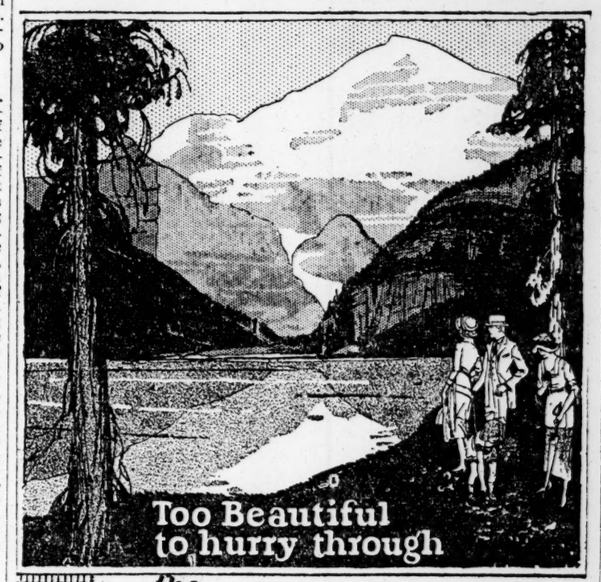

With a crash, which was heard over the entire yard, the chute gave way and a cloud of dust and smoke rose high into the air burying the unfortunate victims beneath it. Officials were immediately notified and every available man in the yards joined in the rescue work.

Those who saw the accident and aided in the rescue work declare that it was nothing short of a miracle that all of the men were not killed instantly, and still more marvelous that they were not suffocated before rescued.

HUGHES APPLAUDS WORLD TRIBUNAL

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Hanover, N. H., June 19.—The permanent court of international justice constitutes a tribunal with standards "that conform to our highest courts" Secretary Hughes said here today, speaking at the alumni gathering in connection with commencement exercises at Dartmouth college.

"I make bold to say," Mr. Hughes said, "that the United States could today, with greater satisfaction, submit disputes to which it is a party to this court than to any other arbitral tribunal it would be possible to set up."

Mr. Hughes applauded "the increasing interest in foreign peoples and our relations with them" now evident in the United States, but said that if this interest was not to serve "merely to promote the constant endeavors of propagandists or of radical groups . . . it must have its support in a careful study of history," and the understanding of other nations and their conditions which the colleges should provide.

Peace Desired.

"In our foreign relations we desire peace, security and co-operation," said the secretary. "Would that the spirit of America had one voice, one measure; but there is a babel of voices, a confusion of tongues. If danger threatens us, we happily stand united; but when we are least concerned as to our own safety we are most divided in our counsels. But allowing for all the inevitable differences, is it too much to expect that we should have one controlling voice, one dominant message as to the fundamentals? We are intent on peace, and because of this the United States can never refuse its support to institutions of justice.

"We recognize that there are two classes of controversies which may lead to strife. There are the conflicts of national interest, of political expediency, of rival policies where there is no agreement, no recognized determinating principle, no governing rule of law which may be invoked.

"Here we are bound to recognize the rights of other states, equal members of the family of nations, as we unfailingly insist upon our own. It was said by one of our great statesmen that the foreign policy of the United States may be described as the Monroe Doctrine and the Golden Rule. We shall achieve our highest aims of helpfulness when we think as much of the latter as we properly think of the former.

Not Meddlesomeness.

"Helpfulness is not meddlesomeness, and does not consist in attempts to intrude invited decisions in controversies that are not ours. Our friendly offices are always available when they are welcome and can properly be given, but it must be remembered that friendship has its own technique, and this must be respected if friendship is to continue.

"But in that class of controversies where there are treaties to carry out, and commonly accepted principles and rules of international law to apply, we have a manifest duty. That duty is to maintain the sanctity of international engagements; to aid in securing the impartial adjustment of differences, and thus to insure the adequate administration of international justice.

"But we shall do but lip-service to this cause if we refrain from supporting the agencies of justice. It happens that at this time there exists, is functioning, a permanent court of international justice, equipped with a permanent body of jurists as well qualified for their task as any judges that could be chosen—men whose character and equipment permits no charge of partiality or disqualification. They constitute an independent tribunal with the standards, the tenure of office and the equipment that conforms to the standards of our highest courts. In truth, they constitute in fact as well as in name, an actual court of justice.

"There is no path to the millenium other than the path of justice, and if we discard the best attainable instrumentalities of justice, to that extent we invite the decisions of the sword. The true method of promoting international accord is to seek to avert the clash of interests by agreement and to have agreements fairly interpreted and carried out."

Ships' Doctors Allowed to Issue Liquor on Craft

Washington, June 19.—Ships' doctors on foreign vessels entering American territorial waters will be permitted, while there, under instructions sent to port authorities by the treasury, to regulate the issuance of medicinal liquor on their craft.

The instructions, made public tonight, inform port officers they are to give full consideration to the professional opinions of the ships' doctors, "thus enabling them to carry out measures which they believe to be necessary to preserve the health of the personnel under their care."

The text of the letter sent yesterday by Secretary Mellon to the public health service, instructing its personnel at various ports to comply fully with foreign laws relating to medicinal liquor allowances aboard ships of their nationals, was revealed in the instructions, distributed to medical officers in the service of Surgeon General Cumming.

Agreement was general that the instructions have opened the door for ships' physicians to include whatever liquors ordinarily are provided as crew rations in the category of "medicinal" requirements. There was no denial of this interpretation from any source, but treasury officials made it plain that beverage liquor still remained under prohibition by the supreme court decision barring it from American waters.

1 DEAD, SEVERAL INJURED IN RIOT

Savannah, Ga., June 20.—One man is dead here this morning and several others are in hospitals in more or less serious condition as a result of firing in a mob assembled in front of the jail where Walter Lee, negro, charged with criminal assault on a white woman is being held.

O. Claude Parker, Jr., the dead man, was shot in the stomach and died a few minutes later in a hospital.

The mob, estimated at more than two thousand persons, formed shortly before midnight, and increased in number. The military was called to preserve order. Sheriff Merritt Dixon told the mob that the jail would be defended against any attempt at storm.

At 1:30 o'clock, shortly after the military assumed control, a threatening section of the crowd was fired upon.

George Bart, a baker's son, is one of the seriously wounded.

Supposed Empty Tank Explodes; 1 Killed, 4 Hurt

Nashville, Tenn., June 19.—With a roar like the discharge of heavy ordinance, a 220-gallon steel tank, supposed to be empty and said to have come from the Old Hickory Powder plant, exploded this morning at 7:45 o'clock in front of the Nashville Machine and Supply company, 123 Third Avenue, North, killing one man and injuring at least four, partially wrecking the company's building and doing other property damage in the vicinity.

David Zopfi, 51, employee of the machine company, was engaged in taking the nipples off the tank, which was to be used in a water system at the Knapp School of Country Life, and which was on the sidewalk in front of the company's plant. Zopfi's body was blown across Third avenue and badly mutilated. He died after reaching the City hospital. A truck in an alleyway was knocked into the street and the gas tank fired, the truck being wrecked. Wiley Eubanks, negro driver, was badly shocked. Arthur McCord, 19, Zopfi's helper, was badly burned and cut. Lieutenant A. J. Eckhart, of fire company No. 9, a passerby, was knocked down and cut by flying glass. C. D. Lacy was knocked senseless at his desk in the office of the machine company. None of the injured are considered serious. One end of the tank was blown a distance of half a block and the tank itself was out 75 feet. According to officials of the company, the explosion was probably due to fumes of nitroglycerin in the tank.

Ruch Barton, of Lavonia, leader of the laymen of the North Georgia conference, is expected to attend.

STATEHOOD ASKED FOR PORTO RICO

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

San Juan, P. R., June 19.—Eventual statehood for Porto Rico was advocated by Horace M. Towner, the new governor, in his first message to the legislature yesterday.

"I am not authorized to speak for congress or the administration," he said, "but I do not hesitate to express my own belief and desire that eventually Porto Rico should become a state of the union.

"I am in favor also of a constantly increasing measure of self-government until statehood is obtained."

The governor said he was impressed with the belief that Porto Rico should be receiving federal aid for many of its problems and he urged that steps be taken to have extended to the island the provisions of the vocational education act, the highway extension act, the Smith-Lever act, the short-time credits act, the maternity act and others from which states now benefit.

Arrest Suspect In Greek Murder At Madison, Ga.

Madison, Ga., June 19.—(Special.) Nick Morakes has been arrested and lodged in the Morgan county jail charged with complicity in the murder recently of Jimmie Morakes, proprietor of a local restaurant, whose mangled body was found near Columbia, S. C., about 10 days ago.

John Morakes and Joun Potris, who were arrested shortly after discovery of the crime, are being held without bond awaiting commitment trial. The commitment trial was scheduled to be held this afternoon, but at the request of Solicitor General Doyle Campbell, it was postponed until Thursday afterroon.

Solicitor Campbell, in asking postponement, stated he had located additional important witnesses in South Carolina, and wished sufficient time to produce his witnesses in court. Attorneys Green Johnson and A. G. Foster, of the law firm of Johnson & Foster, representing the defendants, resisted the postponement, declaring they were ready for trial.

The theory of the state, according to the belief in local circles, is that Nick Morakes, latest to be arrested in connection with the case, killed Jimmie Morakes in the rear of the Busy Bee cafe here, on the night of Saturday, June 9, and that the other defendants, John Morakes and John Potris, came from Atlanta in an automobile sometime during the night and transported the dead body to within three miles of Columbia, S. C.

Seek Woman Witness.

It is thought that one of the witnesses sought by the state is a woman, who claims to have seen two men in an automobile bearing a Georgia license tag, loitering near the spot where the body later was located. It is understood that she has consented to come to Madison in an effort to identify John Morakes and Potris as the men she saw Sunday, June 10.

Attorneys Johnson and Foster declare that there is nothing but circumstantial evidence against their client and are basing their defense on a complete alibi.

Witnesses were present today from Atlanta who have stated they were in company with the accused pair in Atlanta at the time the murder is supposed to have been committed, and for sometime afterward.

When the preliminary trial was called this afternoon by Justice of Peace Warner Merritt in the superior court, the courtroom was crowded, in tense interest in the case having been aroused because of the popularity of the slain man and of the veil of mystery that shrouds the murder.

"We were ready for trial this afternoon," declared Attorney Foster, "but are willing to give the state a reasonable opportunity to prepare their case."

It is understood that Solicitor Campbell will be assisted by an imposing array of local legal talent when the case is called Thursday afternoon.

Constant Vigilance the Price of Quality

To the man on the street, cement may seem nothing more than an uninteresting gray powder which is used in construction work. But to the chemist—the trained scientist who knows—it has a pedigree. To him cement is a carefully compounded product, the result of a long series of chemical and mechanical operations, checked by the unremitting watchfulness of modern laboratory skill.

At every stage in its manufacture from quarry to loaded box car, portland cement and the materials from which it is made are subjected to the most exacting scientific tests.

The geologist and the chemist must make their examinations and approve the available raw materials even before the site for a mill is chosen.

Once the mill's machinery is busily making cement, chemists and physicists test raw materials and finished product at least eleven times.

The plant laboratory operates 24 hours a day to maintain constant control on every process. Finally, each carload is sampled before the railroad hauls it away. Cement is a quality product.

Harding Sees Small Hope for Reduction In National Taxes

Washington, June 19.—Hope of material tax reductions in years to come is slight, if president Harding has gauged the trend of expanding goverment activities correctly.

Through the budget system, the president has been driving remorselessly for economies in the routine, or household expenses of the goverment.

"But a day will come when we must deal with increases, because there must be expanding activities and attending growth of cost in the government on a growing nation," Harding said in addressing the business officers of the government at the semi-annual meeting Monday. "Our big problem is to find the irreducible minimum upon which we may consistently enlarge."

Outlining his drive to squeeze routine expenses down to bed rock, the president said: Government expenses for the fiscal year ending June 30, will be $200,000,000 below receipts. A deficit of $92,000,000 had been expected.

This is $256,000,000 less than the government cost last year. Appropriations for the year beginning July are $3,706,000,000, or $234,000,000 below those of this year.

By proper economy, the president said, this can be cut more than $200,000,000—which would hold the government's expenses next year within $3,000,000,000. Excluding the $500,000,000 that will be paid toward reduction of the national debt.

Harding Preparing Addresses Planned For Trip Through West

Washington, June 19.—Denying himself to practically all callers, president Harding is dictating by the hour on the addresses he is to make on the western trip.

He has completed the manuscript for his speeches at St. Louis, Kansas City, Hutchinson, Kansas, Denver and Salt Lake City.

The presidential party leaves Wednesday, and the first formal address is at St. Louis Thursday night.

RANGER MAN KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Calhoun, Ga., June 19.—(Special.) Frank Shope, of this county, was killed instantly last night and M. H. Clark, of Macon, was injured, when the automobile in which they were riding overturned. It was at first thought that Clark was seriously injured, but later it developed his injuries were very slight.

When the car overturned, Shope was caught under the edge, breaking his back and causing instant death.

Clark, who was driving the car, states that he was driving rapidly and Shipe in a playful manner caught hold of the steering wheel, causing him to lose control and the car went into a ditch and turned turtle.

Both men were pinned underneath the car for about thirty minutes before anyone knew of the accident. Shope was only twenty years old, and unmarried. His funeral will be tomorrow at 10 o'clock at Ranger, where the accident occurred.

CHARGE VIOLATION OF U. S. BANK LAWS

Albany, Ga., June 19.—(Special.) Alleged violations of the national banking laws in 1921 led to the indictment by a federal grand jury today of J. E. Foy, former cashier of the Citizens First National Bank, of Albany, and J. H. McNeill, who at one time was a director of the bank.

The transactions which are alleged to have violated the national banking laws were in connection with the business of the West Georgia Pine company, a lumber concern of which McNeill was the head. Foy is charged with paying checks which he knew were valueless, and McNeill with being a party to the transactions.

It is not charged in the indictments that the bank suffered any financial loss and in a statement issued this afternoon, Foy declared that if there were any technical violations of the banking laws the bank profited greatly thereby. He said he courted the fullest investigation of all the transactions. He resigned as cashier of the bank more than a year ago.

The grand jury adjourned after being in session only one day.

SAVANNAH READY FOR CELEBRATION.

Savannah, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—The Savannah end of preparations for the reception to the big party composing The Constitution's delegation to come to the Tybee highway opening have been completed.

There will be noises galore to mark the start of the motorcade to pass over the twenty-mile stretch of concrete and bridge work from Savannah, via Thunderbolt, over Whitemarsh and Wilmington Islands to Tybee Island. "Big Duke," the hundred-year-old fire bell, will sound the first note of welcome to the visitors; the Hussars will fire cannon to signalize the event, one of the pieces being the ancient cannon presented to this old military organization by General George Washington in person on a visit to Savannah soon after the revolution.

From two thousand to three thousand decorated cars are expected to be in line for the parade to the island.

At the formal opening exercises at Tybee it is hoped the governors of both Georgia and South Carolina will be present, with both senators from Georgia, one of the Carolina senators and at least half a dozen members of congress. The chairman and members of the state highway commission will be present.

Bathing Girl Contest.

Thursday will be featured by the military program and the bathing girl contest in which there are now more than three hundred entrants. The famous eighth infantry, now at Fort Screven, last to return from the Rhineland, will give a program of stunts as they were put on in Germany.

In addition to other maneuvers Friday will be featured by field day exercises, in which hundreds of college and high school athletes will compete in a dozen events, from running races to shot-put contests.

The boxing card for Friday evening is under direction of the American legion and Fort Screven's military organization. The main bout will be between Terry Baker, champion featherweight of the Rhine forces and Kid Peck, of Columbus, southern champion. Other bouts include Eddie Cook vs Dick Leonard; Johnnie Marlowe vs Battling Dupree, and Grub Alexander vs Gene Pointer. In addition there will be a free-for-all in which five husky negroes will contend at once in the ring.

On Saturday both the girl scouts and the boy scouts will put on morning programs which will have many new features. The women's and men's swimming contests will take place Saturday. There are new entries also for the canoe race. The Red Cross life saving contests will be a feature of the day and the greatest feature of all will be the tri-state beauty contest.

Each evening of the three days the tri-state dancing contest will make the closing hours a delight, with a spectacular "surprise" to be pulled at 10 o'clock on each night. An invitation tourney on the Savannah course will be a specially important event.

There are more than thirty organizations co-operating in Savannah to make the three-day events a success. The county commissioners have arranged a shore-dinner which required several carloads of provisions to prepare. The city government, the citizens' special committee, the board of trade, the Americal legion, the Gold club, the women's federation, the Rotary, Kiwanis, Civitans, Lions and American Business Luncheon clubs, the Motor club, the several business organizations of the merchants and many others are working to add to the interest of the occasion.

QUESTION LEGALITY OF STATE BANK LAW

The constitutionality of the Georgia banking law is being put to the test in the case brought by the stockholders of the Bank of Lawrenceville against T. R. Bennett, state superintendent of banks, seeking to prevent the collection of assessments levied against the stockholders. The case was heard Tuesday before Federal Judges Brown, of Florida; Alex C. King and Samuel H. Sibley in the district court here, but decision was withheld until after further deliberations.

The constitutionality of the act was upheld by Attorney General George M. Napier, associated with State Senator A. O. Nix, of Lawrenceville, who contended that the law is modelled after the national banking act and the state bank examiner occupies much the same position as the comptroller of the currency.

The plaintiffs contended that section 20 violates due process of the law and is not constitutional, also insisting upon the rights of stockholders to set off the assessment claims against them by deposits and other funds due them by the bank.

129 ACRES OF LAND IN RABUN COUNTY BOUGHT FOR PARK

Purchase of 129 acres in Rabun county to be included as a part of the Nantahala national forest has been approved by the national forest reservation commission, according to information just received here from the forest service of the United States department of agriculture.

Nantahala national forest protects extensive waterpower developments on the Savannah river, from which power is distributed over a large area in upper South Carolina and Georgia, it is started, going to large numbers of cities and towns as well as various industrial plants.

Purchase of 267 acres in Oconee county, South Carolina, also has been authorized, it is learned, and this tract will be added to the Nantahala forest.

In Green county, Tennessee, 335 acres are to be added to the Pisgah national forest, it is indicated, this stretch being included among the 11,457 acres that are to be acquired in eight eastern states for national forest purpose.

The average price to be paid for the Green county land is said to be $3.95 an acre.

KLONCILIUM ACTS TODAY ON CHARGES AGAINST WIZARD

Withdrawal of Colonel William Joseph Simmons and Dr. Caleb A. Ridley from the session and postponement of action on charges of mismanagement against Imperial Wizard H. W. Evans featured the first day of the special called meeting of the kloncilium of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan at the imperial palace Tuesday.

Definite action either absolving Evans of the charges or placing the blame on him will be taken Wednesday, it was reported. Eleven of the 15 members of the kloncilium are reported to be favoring the exoneration of Evans.

Emperor Simmons and Dr. Ridley, imperial kludd, and two other members of the kloncilium who are said to be insisting that the Evans administration be condemned, are reported to have bolted the session shortly after it convened.

NEW WATER POWER BILL IS PLANNED FOR LEGISLATURE

Declaring that development of water power in Georgia under private ownership has been totally insufficient to meet industrial plans of the state, the Municipal League of Georgia has issued a statement, in which it declares its purpose of asking legislation this year to permit counties and municipalities to develop water power for themselves.

The statement cites figures which, it claims, prove that this state is behind adjoining states in the development of its water power potentialities, and charges that Georgia is lagging in industrial growth for this reason.

REGNAS WILL FIGHT LEASE CANCELLATION

Maintaining that the lease held by the Capital City Building & Market company from Ben J. Massell on the governor's mansion property at Peachtree and Cain streets is still in effect, J. R. Regnas, vice president and general manager of the market concern, Tuesday announced that cancellation of the contract will be vigorously fought.

Cancellation of the lease was announced earlier in the day by Mr. Massell, who stated that the lessees had failed to comply with the terms of the agreement, particularly with the specifications that $200,000 worth of construction be accomplished "within a reasonable time" after December 1, 1922.

"We are very much surprised to see the statement to the effect that Mr. Massell proposes to erect on property leased from him a large hotel," Mr. Regnas said.

"The Capital City Building and Market company has no intention of abandoning a building project on the site. It began work the latter part of 1922 and since that time has been pushing as best it could plans for the financing and erection of a permanent building.

"We are advised that our lease is in full force and any attempt of Mr. Massell to cancel it will be vigorously combatted."

According to Mr. Massell, negotiations for the erection of a $2,000,000 hotel on the property are under way. The proposed structure would contain from 500 to 600 rooms and would be 15 stories high, the greatest height permitted under the zoning ordinance.

COURTS HONOR JURIST'S MEMORY BY ADJOURNING

All branches of Fulton superior court, the city court of Atlanta and the municipal court were closed Tuesday in respect to Judge W. R. Hammond, whose funeral was held Tuesday morning at the residence of his niece, Mrs. Robert F. Sheddon, of 1081 Peachtree road. Judge Hammond died Monday after an illness of long duration. Interment was in Oakland cemetery.

Services were in charge of Rev. S. R. Belk, pastor of the Trinity Methodist church, of which the deceased was a steward for many years. Pallbearers were W. M. Rawson, Vaughn Nixon, Eugene R. Callaway, Henry Johnson, Malcolm Johnson and Marion Smith. Among those in the honorary escort were Judges W. D. Ellis, George L. Bell, John D. Humphries and E. D. Thomas of the superior court, and Judges H. M. Reid and Andy Calhoun.

WILL GIVE HEARING TO JITNEY DRIVERS

Before singing the ordinance providing for increasing indemnity bonds of jitney drivers from $1,000 to $5,000, as passed by city council Monday afternoon, Mayor Walter A. Sims Tuesday promised a delegation of jitney drivers that he would allow them a hearing on the increase.

The measure adopted by council provides that all jitney drivers shall furnish indemnity bonds of $5,000; their city licenses increased from $60 to $75 per five-passenger machine and $15 additional for all machines with higher seating capacity, and that they be required to adhere to rigid schedules over stipulated routes.

Sam F. Schlesinger, president of the Atlanta Jiney Bus association, declared that a large delegation of members would appear before the mayor and endeavor to have him veto the measure on the grounds that its provisions were too drastic and would virtually put them out of business.

Former Mayor James L. Key, counsel for the jitney association, will probably make the leading argument for the jitney drivers at the hearing before Mayor Sims, which will be held Wednesday morning in the mayor's office.

TOO MANY "REFORMERS."

One of the nation's most prominent ministers, who is also a newspaper commentator on affairs in the country's national life, dwells upon the supreme importance to all the people of public and domestic tranquility.

"Where everyone does as he pleases no one can do as he pleases," suggested this divine, and then with pointed emphasis he pointed out a truth that is unchallengeable—

"Order is the first necessity of communal life, for it even comes before justice and mercy."

Certainly, there can be no structure without the foundation, and if the structure is supposed to stand the foundation must be built with engineering precision and order.

There can be no justice or mercy without a base—a foundation to stand upon—and that base is "order."

These are fundamental truths that are not heeded, of course, by the radicals, nor are they sufficiently heeded by fanatical "reformers," most of whom, whether in the guise of "uplift," or of social betterment, or of hero-worshiping of felons, are radicals of the most extreme type, and sometimes of the most dangerous type.

Radical propaganda is built upon a system that destroys constituted order. It feeds upon ignorance and prejudice, and fattens upon creating discontent and unrest among workers, most of them poor, perhaps, so far as accumulations of worldly goods go.

These very classes—among whom are thousands of useful and contented and happy people in the south—are taught, or efforts of radical agents and "reformers" are directed to that end, that by disturbing conditions their own welfare will be bettered by the disturbance.

Thousands of good, prospering men and women in industry have listened to such doctrines of communism and syndicalism and have been forced, by the tearing down of the industrial fabric by these radicals, to drink deep and to the dregs of the cup of economic distress.

Common sense, plain every day reason, would tear into shreds such propaganda, and the wonder is that any American-born people listen to it. It is obvious, as a child can see, that "order" is the friend, the salvation of the weak, and that in any disorder it is the stormy and violent who rule.

As this same divine has so aptly said, "the rights of the common people and the masses can never be attained any other way than by order."

Edson White, president of Armour & Co., in an address at the weekly meeting of the Chicago Association of Commerce the other day, said:

"There is no danger of such monopoly, for the reason that there are no patent rights or trade secrets which prevent any man who wants to from the handling of meat, and if it ever came to pass that vast profits were being made at the expense of the producing and consuming public, those very profits would attract such competition and so divide the business that the evils complained of would be eliminated."

Whether he so intended it or not this thought deals with the inseparable relationship between business and the nation's prosperity. Large business has been hampered in the past few years by prejudices and bitterness on the part of political influence that feed upon ignorance, and upon the part of an element of misguided people more than by any other influence. And the reflection has been felt by the masses.

The growers of hogs and sheep and cattle for the merchant trade would be in sore distress if it were not for the packing interests in which millions are invested as market places for the producers.

At the same time there are no trade secrets or patented formulas in curing meat, and there are a number of such packing institutions in the south, operated by southern capital, and co-ordinating to bring the top of the market for southern grown meats.

There is such a plant in Atlanta and it has assumed enormous size, and is of inestimable benefit to the livestock industry of Georgia.

Radicals and "reformers" and fanatical and impracticable "uplifters" who know nothing about the economic affairs of the nation, or of any section, are obstructing the cause of progress by knocking the props of contentment from under the great industrial elements of this country.

The south has been gratifyingly free from these pessimists and obstructionists, most of whom are paid agents of foreign societies, but with the move of eastern industry into the fields of the raw products, the propaganda scouts have been sent out; and the sooner they are led to the door the better it will be for the millions of industrial workers in the south who are today happy and contented, and will remain so if let alone by the wolves who come in sheeps' clothing.

WOMEN ARE AROUSED.

It is hoped that at last a glimmer of determination for the more widespread observance of the eighteenth amendment is seen. The hope comes from women. It springs from the meeting of the national committee of law enforcement held in New York June 15.

Almost 100 women, representing the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the Council of Women for Home Missions, the Federation of Women's Boards of Foreign Missions of North America, the National Parent-Teacher association, the National Woman's Christian Temperance union, the International Order of King's Daughters, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the American Legion auxiliary, the National Council of Women, the Young Woman's Christian association and others attended this meeting.

The first definite act was the sending of a cable to the prime minister of England thanking England for its stand in sending ships without liquor into this country.

The purpose of this conference of the representatives of women's organizations is first educational. It was clearly stated during the meeting that "fears may well be entertained for the future of the amendment."

Women are coming slowly, but surely, into the realization of the power they now wield. Wherever they organize intelligently, with enlightened and informed understanding, for an issue of whatever nature, those most interested may well look to the result.

The 1924 elections are looming up. The 10,000,000 American women members of the organizations represented at the conference in New York are alive to the fact that with them are numbers and powers sufficient to be reckoned with.

Between now and the time of election law enforcement groups will be organized in every community, and groups which shall persistently educate a following as to the importance of prohibition will also be organized.

Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, of Beverly, Mass., chairman of the committee, says, significantly: "We shall use our votes in 1924, and we shall organize law enforcement groups in every local community. This is not a paper organization. Our 10,000,000 women will be expected to do actual work for the cause, a cause which will demand almost as much devotion as the war. In every town we shall have a corps of women sitting in the courts watching the enforcement of the law."

And in just this point lies the beneficence of this organization. The disregard of law which has accompanied the eighteenth amendment, the utter lack of respect for the authority or authorities which should enforce it, have presented the most serious phase of this entire unhappy situation.

Disregard of law, disobedience to its purpose, lack of respect for its meaning lead to an insidious moral degeneracy which can only culminate in a general breaking down of the finer social restraints which are the very basis of our social and governmental existence.

No more timely undertaking can be made than this which has been inaugurated by women.

If being voters means exercising their franchise in a definite and fine direction such as this, we may well rejoice not only that women have voting power, but that they begin to see the avenues through which it may best be expressed.

SNORING.

Why not, some time, an exhaustive article on snoring? suggests a reader.

The main cause of snoring is relaxation of the plate. Now one can produce a nice gentlemanly kind of snore with his mouth or lips closed, but this is rare. One can also produce a kind of death rattle with his mouth wide open—this is the deplorable snore which breaks up families. It takes a wife of more than the modern standard of endurance to stick with a man who tears off this death rattle through the hideous hours of the night, a blood-curdling sound which has extraordinary carrying power and penetrates to the farthest corners of the house, sometimes seeming to cause the very timbers to tremble.

There is one thing I think I know about snoring—I don't know, but I just think I know it—a course of half a dozen nose treatments by a doctor who treats nose and throat troubles, will frequently bring peace and happiness to the estranged family. The doctor takes a survey of the interior of the nose by means of his little head light or mirror and speculum, mutters something about turbinal hypertrophy or intumescent rhinitis or thickening of the inferior turbinate and proceeds to daub it up with something that bites and smarts for a time. Some such seance repeated every few days for a few times, restores "tone" to the congested, swollen, relaxed lining of the back part of the nose cavity; presently friend wife returns from the attic and sleeps sweetly in her own trundle-bed once more, secure for a time from hideous disturbance.

That's that.

I don't know any more about snoring. But I see we have a few inches of space left, so I'll add a conjecture or theory I have on the subject. Stand up a hundred persons, either sex, and I think I can pick out almost at a glance the snorers. I'm almost certain I could pick them out if you'll have the hundred persons walk about and do one or two simple little physical movements for me. My notion is that one in good physical trim, in vigorous condition, not abnormally stout, will not trouble folks much with his or her snoring, but that the individual whose body is flabby from neglect of physical training, exercise, is likely to perpetrate some death-defying deeds along this line, especially when he or she happens to have a slight congestion incident to a coryza or a sore throat or anything like that.

So there you are. An exhaustive monograph on snoring; brief as it is, I flatter myself there isn't much more to be said on the subject, unless one should append a complete lexicon of cusswords for the use of members of the snorer's household.

Pastor Calls Attention To Deadly Traffic Menace

Editor Constitution: I don't think I have missed an edition of The Constitution in 45 years, and I think your leading editorial in this morning's paper strikes truer to the heart of an evil and is more timely than any you have ever written.

I live on the Bankhead highway (old Mayson and Turner road), leading westward from Atlanta, now one of the most enticing driveways in Fulton county. The conditions you describe are manifest here on Sunday afternoons and evenings to an extent unbelievable.

Last Sunday evening scores of pedestrians walking to the churches along the stretch between Maddox park and Center Hill were kept constantly jumping from the road to the gutter to escape sudden death from drunk, irresponsible and mischievous drivers.

My wife and myself, on the way to our church at Fortified Hills, were first driven from the right side of the road to the left—facing traffic—because of the constant danger of the rear approach of these devils on a joy ride.

Three times, in 300 yards, we were driven to the gutter by mischievous drivers meeting us and fudging by way of rebuke for being on the "wrong" side.

I saw two young women driving, while their lovers caressed them, and one young man made a precarious passage at about forty miles per with his lady love hanging to his neck.

I am heartily in favor of catching all the bootleggers we can, but if our county police could spare a little of their valuable time to handle the situation here indicated, it would be a most commendable service.

It is shameful that the great host of genteel and fairminded ladies and gentlemen who make up the bulk of the clan of autoists, should be made odious by the devilish few who do not seem to have either sense or principle. As you suggest, the answer may be at last in an outraged public sentiment.

In the meantime the county police could do a little here and there. If the force is too small to meet the needs of the situation, extra men should be put on on Sunday afternoons.

The roads belong to all the people—riders as well as walkers—and all must recognize the right of the other, and each be careful not to infringe, but the burden of courtesy is on the drivers on the roads not provided with sidewalks. Certainly no pedestrian is going to contest the road with a flying gas chariot unless he is crazy.

So here is wishing more power to your pen. WM. S. WEIR,
Pastor Fortified Hills Baptist Church.

RETAILERS TO DISCUSS OVERHEAD EXPENSES

"How Overhead Expense Is Handled and Distributed—and the Reasons Why" will be the subject of discussion at the final summer membership meeting of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association to be held Thursday at the Chamber of Commerce Assembly hall. The meeting will be presided over by F. J. Paxon.

Eight prominent merchants have been selected to deliver five-minute talks on the subject under discussion. An excellent musical program also has been arranged. As there will be no meetings during July and August, this will be the final gathering of the summer.

Just In Passing
BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON

On this page today is a very beautiful and touching tribute from Jack Williams, editor of The Waycross Journal Herald, to one of the most prominent and useful citizens of his community, who was suddenly called to his reward last Friday.

The tribute is to V. L. Stanton, who was a builder of the higher ideals of citizenship; a worker in the vineyard of civic progress; a constructive force whose unselfish influence had for a generation been felt in every worthwhile activity, not alone for Waycross and his own section, but for the state at large, for he loved Georgia just as his brother, the immortal Frank L., loves it, and has carried its glory, in verse and song, to the far corners of the south, and to the people of every tongue.

"He was a devoted husband, a kind and indulgent father, a tender brother and to his friends the soul of fellowship—but the greatest of all, he was a man"!

Thus wrote the editor of his home paper; and no greater tribute could be paid, and no greater monument could he have left behind than the memory of that crowning attribute—that which makes a man a man!

On several occasions I met V. L. Stanton as he dropped in on his brother in The Constitution office, while he visited or passed through Atlanta in meeting the various demands upon his time that he had so unstintingly dedicated to service.

Only a few days ago he visited while en route to Chattanooga to attend the meeting of the Dixie Highway association, with which he was prominently connected; and again, only recently, he passed through en route to Athens, where he went also in his unselfish devotion to the educational interests of his state—and in which he took a most potential part.

Men of service; men who live for others and not for self; who feel the inspiration of duty as a citizen; to help constructively in all that is good and enlightening and uplifting—and who serve with no other motive than to help in the development of the resources of their state, and in bringing contentment and prosperity to the people—men of democratic ideals, who believe in the fellowship of man, and in the sunshine of human sympathy—such men are priceless assets in this world of nervous energy, with its overload of commercialized selfishness.

And just such a man was V. L. Stanton, embodying all the sweet traits of humanity with which his brother, Frank L. Stanton, is so richly endowed, and added to this a virile force in outside activities that would be unnatural for a poet who sings to the world from the seclusion of his study, or during the wakeful moments of the midnight muse, when the rest of the world is asleep.

In the inevitable call of time—the call which all must answer sooner or later—the useful go along with the useless, and we think sometimes that the ratio is unfair, but it isn't. Just as God plucks the most beautiful bud from the garden of roses, the comfort is in the thought that God wants just such an imperial flower for His own throne—and we say, with as much contentment as trusting hearts can summon, "God's will be done."

It is strange that such men as George T. Betts and V. L. Stanton are snatched from earth at the hour of their greatest service and usefulness; but the great Ruler of the universe knows best!

It is well!

Our responsibility is in letting the example of their lives quicken us to greater service in the field of humanity.

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE
BY O. O. M'INTYRE

New York, June 19.—They took us to a Rotary club luncheon today. The guest of honor was Charles M. Schwab. He had with him Thayer, a banker from New York. Thayer is the type of banker I imagine can say "No" with a click. Mr. Schwab seemed very fond of him. Still, no banker could say "No" to Schwab.

I sat next to Eddie Rickenbacker, hero of a hundred thrills. Eddie has much of that intangible something known as "personal magnetism." He made an earnest speech and when he spoke of standing at the graves in France recently of those who had been with him when he was "America's ace of aces," he rose to heights of true eloquence. He is not, perhaps, "college educated," as we know the term, but he is tremendously sincere.

I wondered why they parked the writers and editors across the table from Mr. Schwab and the coterie of bankers. At times we show great self-restraint. I don't think one of us would have told him a hard-luck story—at least until after lunch.

Meredith Nicholson introduced Howard, Kyne, Long and myself. He explained that Howard and Long would not speak, but would, as they say on the stage, "take a bow." Each, as native Hoosiers who have made their way, got a great reception.

In explaining that Howard and Long would not speak, I wondered what he expected me to do. And about that time I began to break out in a gentle cold sweat. Kyne was next introduced and told some of his inimitable stories that have made him famous as the author of "Cappy Ricks."

Nicholson next introduced me, touching upon my manner of personal dress, which is neither neat nor gaudy—just loud. With my knees castanetting, I stood up and mumbled something and sat down, in utter confusion, almost missing the chair.

It was my first visit to a Rotary luncheon. I believe Sinclair Lewis has subjected them to much unjust "spoofing" in his Babbitt. It was as intelligent a body of men as I have ever seen. Each calls the other intelligent by first name. They have a high sense of civic pride, and are splendid hosts. It is not difficult to see how such an organization is of inestimable benefit to any ambitious community.

Tonight we started out on the "great adventure"—the chicken dinner. Our appetites had been whetted by a long automobile ride around Indianapolis—a city of very few apartments, but many homes and spacious lawns.

I saw many billboards advertising products named "James Whitcomb Riley." We also saw Booth Tarkington's home.

The chicken dinner was served in a little cottage about a half hour's ride from the hotel. There was one large table, and, praise to our host, all the food was out in full view for guests to reach for. I developed a boarding house reach years ago, and was in good form.

It was real fried chicken—also mashed potatoes, cream gravy, sweet potatoes, succotash, cottage cheese, coleslaw, hot biscuits, all manner of home-made preserves, corn, string beans, steaming coffee and home-made strawberry ice cream and cake.

There was a home talent negro jazz band, and one member was as funny as Bert Williams. Afterward we told stories, danced and walked about among the tall sycamores.

About midnight we started back for town, passing the motor speedway. Miles of cars—cars from every state of the union—were waiting outside the gates to be in "at the death" on tomorrow. Most of the occupants of the cars were sound asleep.

HERO OF SIXTIES RECALLS BATTLES

and even went into detail about their personal appearance.

He told how he had turned his own ice cream parlor "in the finest little city on God's earth" into an armory, where he drilled the first Muscogee rifles and later the Lula guards, at Columbus, Ga. He recounted the dreadful story of Andersonville prison, where guards and union prisoners literally starved to death through lack of food and where he was in charge of the stores after he was disabled in the retreat from Kentucky.

His eyes lit up with fire when he spoke of the enthusiasm of the citizens of Columbus, who left the workshops and the factories, the offices and the farms to enlist in the armies of the south.

The Jackson Avengers.

One of the first units Captain Phelps was connected with were the Jackson Avengers, named thus in honor of the first southerner who was killed by the union forces. Jackson had waved a confederate flag in a Virginia town at the beginning of the trouble between north and south and he was shot down by the union soldiers.

In the spring of 1862 Captain Phelps was married to Miss Lucy Elizabeth Briggs and they spent their honeymoon in the army. He went home by permission of the secretary of war and organized the Lula guards, named in honor of his wife.

"She was my company's Red Cross organization when we were attached to the army of the west," Captain said. "I had to stand for all the expenses of equipment of these companies. There were no bandages, no rifles and no equipment of any kind very often and moreover I had often to compensate families of soldiers who enlisted. I drilled the men in my own ice cream parlor in Columbus.

"This sword," continued the veteran, pulling out a fine Damascus steel blade, "cost me $30,000 in gold valuation."

"How do you mean. It is a fine sabre but it certainly is not worth that huge sum, especially figured in the value of currency of that day?" he was asked.

"Cost Me $30,000."

"It cost me $30,000 in gold value because I went into the war with that amount and I came out with only my sword," the captain smiled.

"Were you ever compensated in any way for your sacrifices?"

"I never received a cent from the government or any one else," he answered. "Once I had a belt for this sword, but that is another story," he continued. "Well, I'll tell you. On April 9, 1865, Gen. Howell Cobb arrived in Columbus to take charge of the Confederate forces. He was a very corpulent man and we could not get a belt to go around him. Mine was the only one that could be stretched to fit him.

"All the forces General Cobb had were called hospital rats, they were mostly disabled men. But they put up a fierce battle when the time came a few days after the general's arrival. The battle of Columbus was the last real battle of the war. You can look up the government archives in Washington, D. C., for verification of my satement," the captain said.

"There were no cannons in that battle, just pistols and muskets. I was at headquarters in the city. General Wilson's Raiders came in from the west. It was a beautiful moonlight night when the firing started and lasted all day. I could hear it breaking out with redoubled vigor time and again and then die away again, until finally it suddenly stopped.

"Then a man came riding down to headquarters and told me that the battle had gone against us and that General Cobb had sent orders for me to save myself and my men in the best possible way. I drew my sword and placed it on the table in front of me and I did not sheath it until General Bentwell's men came and demanded surrender.

Surrenders Sword.

"The general was a courteous man. He asked us to take the oath of allegiance to the union. I asked him what privileges we would have if we took the oath and he told us the same privileges you have always had with the exception of holding slaves. I then told him I was ready. I took the oath and surrendered my sword and the general handed it back to me and that is how I came to have it today.

"A remarkable incident occurred during the world war. I saw a fine stalwart soldier walk along the Austell building in Atlanta. I stopped him and said that I hoped he would not have so long to serve as I had at one time. He told me he had already twenty-one years of it. I then asked his name and imagine my surprise when he told me he was John A. Bentwell, son of the union general to whom I had surrendered. He told me his father had lived in Atlanta after the civil war and had died there. But during all the time the general lived here I never heard of him."

Captain Phelps made a good showing in the recent race for state pension commissioner. He is taking the keenest interest in the affairs of the world and had a brokerage office in Atlanta. The captain said that he is a member of the Wesley Memorial Methodist church, the Masonic order, the Gideons and a Knight of the Ku Klux Klan.

PHANTOM LEGIONS SEEN BY VETERAN

an. His eyes have a far-away look. From his chest dangles a cross, the emblem of sacrifice and service. The wind plays with his snow white hair and gradually sleep overwhelms him and he dreams.

Phantom legions appear on yonder hills. The sound of the bugle is heard again and the dull roar of cannons. In front of him pass the matchless armies of the south. The iron squadrons charge into battle, their battle-flags are unfurled although tattered and torn by shell and bullets.

Jackson Leading Men.

There is Jackson again leading his men into deathless attack and surveying the landscape and the progress of battle is the heroic figure of Robert E. Lee. They are all there as the drums beat their rhythmic tattoo and the armies march over the dusty highways of Virginia or along the white bloomed cotton fields that hide the red soil of Georgia.

Gettysburg comes to the Old Soldiers' home and Missionary Ridge and other battle scenes are transplanted as by magic as the old men sit and dream.

So they will sit and talk and dream each day. Their ranks are thinning each year and the remaining band is drawn closer together until the day when:

"On Fame's eternal camping ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And glory guards with solemn round
The bivouac of the dead."

Editor of His Home Paper Pays Beautiful Tribute To Late V. L. Stanton

(By Jack Williams, Editor Waycross (Ga.) Journal Herald.)

We count the most sacred privilege we have to write in these columns whatever tribute we can to such a man as V. L. Stanton, when death comes and breaks the ranks of the circle through which we move through life.

He was a man of generous impulses and never forgot the ways of the pioneer, which was daily demonstrated in his attitude toward hundreds of tourists with whom he came in contact. He was thoroughly at home at all times whether it be with school children, a group of governors, senators, preachers, or at the bedside of the sick, and delighted in all kinds of neighborly offices. He had filled the various relations of life, as son, husband, father, brother, friend, and filled them well. Who can do more?

It was the writer's good fortune to have known Mr. Stanton long and well, and we knew him only to esteem him more highly as the years passed by. Today we with thousands of others miss his kindly smile and friendly greeting; we long in vain to hear the ring of his jovial laughter and to feel again his genial presence.

He was a devoted husband; a kind and indulgent father; a tender brother, and to his friends the soul of fellowship. But the greatest of all—he was a man. And as a man it is that those who knew him best most love to contemplate him. He believed in the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. He believed that the man who scatters flowers in the pathway of his fellowmen, who lets into the dark places of life the sunshine of human sympathy and human happiness, is following in the footsteps of the Master.

Neither poet nor artist has ever been able to portray the grave in colors of brightness and beauty. Bryan, in the "Hymn of Death," could not make the subject beautiful; and yet the cemetery with its marble and its dead, the chair that has no occupant, the fancied echo of the silent voice, and the vacant place in the home, social and lodge life, are mellowing and uplifting in their influence. They ring the best of human nature into the fullness of vigor, crowding back the selfishness and imperiousness of men, and impressing them with the duty of recognition of the value of friendship. It is the broken ties at the grave that prompts us to a fuller appreciation of the tenderness of the ties that are not yet broken; and so while we mourn the loss of our beloved friend and neighbor we may revoice that there is no cloud so dark that there is no light behind it; no sorrow so poignant that there is not a balm for the wound it inflicts.

"How sweet a life was his; how sweet a death;
Living to wing with mirth the merry hour,
Or with his genial tales the heart to cheer;
Dying, to leave a memory like the heath
Of summer, full of sunshine and flowers,
A grief and gladness in the atmosphere."

$132,000 IS PAID FOR VERDERY TRACT

Augusta, Ga., June 19.—(Special.) It was announced this afternoon that the Service Company of Atlanta, an organization working in close alliance with the Citizens' Trust company of Atlanta and Augusta, has bought the Verdery tract in Augusta. The organizations mentioned are owned and operated by colored people. The Verdery tract lies in the southern part of the city and was bought by the Verderys in 1795.

There are now several houses on it on leased ground and the life of the leases is commencing to expire.

H. E. Perry, 180 Auburn avenue, president of the Service company, told The Constitution Tuesday night that the company would develop the Verdery tract into a subdivision for the colored residents of Augusta. Modern improvements, such as paving, curbing and sewerage will be made. The purchase price was $132,000, Perry said.

Hesterly Slashes Throat in Attempt To End Own Life

In an effort to end his own life, J. R. Hesterly, 45, who lives on Boulevard avenue, near the Fulton Bag and Cotton mill, Tuesday night slashed his throat with a razor. The cause of his attempted suicide is believed to have been a family dispute. Physicians at Grady hospital declare that he has only a fighting chance to live, as his windpipe is partially severed.

Detectives Convince Prisoner He Is Innocent Of Confessed Crime

Savannah, Ga., June 19.—(Special.) Savannah detectives today demonstrated to Jack Strup, a white man held by the sheriff of Liberty county, that he was not guilty of a crime which, it is alleged, he had confessed to the Hinesville officer, the holding up and robbing of W. A. Messer, a Savannah taxi driver, of $200 and his car.

Strup, it is said, was arrested by railroad officers at Allenhurst on charge of stealing an auto and burglarizing the A. C. L. warehouse, and when taken immediately confessed to what he thought was charged against him, the Savannah hold-up, for which two young men who claim to be marines from Parris Island are being held.

Detectives with a few questions satisfied themselves that Strup knows nothing about the Savannah case. Why he confessed he does not explain.

Q. When and where did President Harding became a Mason?

A. At Marion, Ohio, Marion Lodge 70, August 27, 1920.

Q. How can I cure a dog of the habit of stealing chickens?

A. If the dog is more than eight months' old the task is almost an impossible one, but you might try sprinkling a dead chicken with cayenne pepper, and putting it where the dog could steal it.

Q. How can I kill the roots of a tree that grow into the joints of a sewer pipe?

A. The U. S. Forest Service advises destroying the roots with quicklime put in a deep ditch dug between the tree and the pipes.

Q. Is there any way by which a soldier can be compelled to pay a long overdue grocery bill?

A. The government cannot compel a soldier to pay a debt, but if the matter is brought to the attention of his commanding officer, and the debt is a just one, he will bring pressure to bear on the soldier to persuade him to pay.

A reader of this column asks information on the negro race, its origin and development, its history in the U. Read this, Graphters: "Editor Pithy Paragraphs—I have just read in your column, 'Bachelor's Ballade,' by Mr. E. T. Larsen. Knowing the scarcity of real good ballades, I take this opportunity thanking you and Mr. Larsen for the pleasure afforded by these lines.

"This, in my humble opinion, is one of the neatest ballades I have seen in many a day.

"Yours sincerely,
"Mrs. William Scales.
"Nashville, Tenn., June 18, 1923."

Of course it was good! Didn't it top the column? We hope Mrs. Scales also had the pleasure of reading Miss Ericsson's reply and Mr. Larsen's rejoinder as well as the ballades by Mrs. T. H. Phinazee, McLaren Anderson and other graphters.

However, ballades are rather long for this column and we would suggest that contributors use this form only occasionally, making their contribs shorter. For instance, J. B. Killegrew today sends in what he calls a "balladette."

Don't forget that jests are just as important as jingles.

Mrs. Lida Wilson Turner and Miss Elizabeth M. Davis win today's passports to Loew's Grand theatre, where a Pithy Paragraph film is shown at every performance. Contribs selected for that win a $5 prize.

Barrow Honored by Staff Of State Agricultural College

Alexander R. Lawton Tells University Alumni Association of Negro Problems.

Athens, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—Chancellor David C. Barrow was signally honored by the staff of the State College of Agriculture at the alumni luncheon held in Hardman hall, which was also dedicated this afternoon. Dr. A. M. Soule, president of the agricultural college, on behalf of the more than one hundred and fifty members of the staff, presented the chancellor with one of the handsomest loving cups with a scroll ever seen here.

On the cup is engraved "To Chancellor David C. Barrow, for 45 years a teacher, scholar, leader." On the scroll is engraved the names of those of the college staff contributing to the cup fund. The presentation came almost as a total surprise, but few in the crowd of one thousand in attendance knowing that an honor was to be conferred on the chancellor.

In accepting the cup the chancellor praised the work that is being done by the agricultural college, praised its growth, praised its head, Dr. Soule, and with touching gratitude thanked the donors of the cup.

Largest Luncheon.

This luncheon of the alumni was the largest ever enjoyed and many women, either graduates or wives and friends of graduates, were in attendance. The newly elected president, Alexander Lawton, of Savannah, presided. He is a member of the class of '77.

Other new officers are Davis Freeman, also of Savannah, who was named first vice president; H. H. Gordon, Jr., Athens, second vice president; Frank D. Foley, Columbus, third vice president; Dr. Sylvanus Morris, Athens, secretary; W. O. Payne, Athens, treasurer, and Dr. Benjamin Yow, Lavonia, and Wallace Miller, Columbus, tied for one of the places on the board of managers. The tie will be settled later by a meeting of the alumni this afternoon.

Dr. Soule gave an illustrated lecture, using living models, of education and progress of the state, and Chancellor Barrow spoke on the "University."

Major J. J. Connor, chairman of the board of trustees of the agricultural college, presented to the board of trustees of the university the building, a handsome brick-veneer structure just completed. He spoke of the wonderful growth of the agricultural college during its sixteen years of modern existence and praised the president and faculty of the institution.

On behalf of the trustees the building was accepted by Judge Peter W. Meldrim, of Savannah, class of 1868.

Miss Lois P. Dowdle, of the agricultural faculty, spoke on the "Woman of Power," and Professor S. H Starr had as his subject "The Man of Vision." The reuniioning classes all had speakers to respond to toasts and the luncheon closed the exercises of Alumni day with the dance following Tuesday night.

Walker to Co-operate.

"I will co-operate 100 per cent personally and officially in the development of the university," Clifford Walker, governor-elect, declared at the meeting.

"I need only say," he continued, "that among all the worthy institutions of the state the old mother university has the first place in my heart as evidenced by an unbroken record of personal attendance at commencement for thirty-two years."

The governor-elect was in Athens Tuesday attending the Alumni day exercises.

In an address that was outspoken and plain in the treatment of a condition just now of peculiar acuteness in Georgia, Alexander R. Lawton, of Savannah, at the annual meeting of the Alumni Association of the University of Georgia here today, spoke on the subject of "The Negro in the South and Elsewhere."

Colonel Lawton told of intensive study of the problem and of information which he has gathered from many sources, in the north and south, at home and abroad.

The speaker emphasied that the superiority of the white race carries with it a proportionate obligation. In touching on the report of the investigation of the Chicago race commissioin, which followed the race riots in that city, Colonel Lawton selected, as practical only, three of the 59 recommendations made by the commission.

The speaker brought out the contrast between "race instinct" and "race prejudice," and voiced a warning against the danger of theory and lack of fundamental data in dealing with the race problem.

Leaders Should Take Thought.

"In this day of perplexing world problems, I speak of one nearer us—the relations between the dominating white race and the dominated negro," Colonel Lawton said. "I bring it to you because it demands the attention of those who should be and are the leaders of enlightened public opinion. I speak plainly and critically; you owe to your state, to the white man and the black man your best thought and leadership that this problem may carry with it the minimum of friction, injustice and evil."

He disclaimed any intention of violating the proprieties by even remotely touching upon politics, and declared that his race instinct forever makes impossible the suggestion of amalgamation. He spoke of "race prejudice" and drew the contrast between the qualities implied in the two terms. He waived the question of the responsibility for the existence of the problem, and said:

"But it is the responsibility of the white race only, and the white race has the higher duty. We are in the ascendency, and no solution or amelioration can progress except on our initiative. While we need the sympathetic co-operation of the negro, we can make some progress without him; he can make none without us. Moreover, the white race has always claimed racial superiority. Who makes this claim must never forget that superiority carries proportionate obligation."

Largely a Southern Problem.

He cited the census figures indicating the percentage and the distribution of negro population; less than 10 per cent of the population of the United States being negro, and nearly 48 per cent of the population in Georgia negro, and declared that "we can expect neither the disappearance nor the diminution of the numbers to a negligible figure." He said that four-fifths of the negroes are in the south; that race instinct and probably race prejudice seems strongest in the English speaking peoples, the southern white people being mostly of British stock. "These facts alone sufficiently explain," he said, "the more conspicuous manifestation of race instinct in the south," though "race istinct may not be justly classed as either sectional or historical," but that "it will manifest itself on reasonable provocation wherever numbers are sufficient to bring frequent contact or economic pressure."

He spoke of the laws which have endeavored to deal, positively or negatively, with the race question, and then reviewed at length the reports of the Chicago race commission following the Chicago riot. He regretted that the report did not indicate the treatment of negroes by whites of British stock. He reviewed the fifty-nine recommendations of the commission, selecting seven, selecting three seemed practical: Providing as good schools and teachers for the negroes as for whites; placing inspectors with authority on street car lines patronized by many negroes, and the appointment of a permanent committee on race relations to continue to study and recommend.

Recognize Race Instinct.

"No individual, no commission, no organization, can progress in the improvement of race relations that discards facts for theory," he asserted, "and does not recognize these fundamental data:

"Race instinct, frequently exaggerated by race prejudice, does exist in the white man, is particularly strong in British stock, and will manifest itself on slight provocation wherever the percentage of negroes is not so negligible as to make contact infrequent.

"It is stimulated by economic pressure, such as competition for jobs, or depreciation of values in residential districts.

"It makes absolutely impossible (at least with British stock) intermarriage, social intercourse, mingling in recreations, assemblies, places of amusement, hotels, restaurants and, where negroes are numerous, in railway cars, stations and schools. It is even impossible in churches. It is as powerful against fear of scriptural punishment in the life to come as against the fear of statutory punishment in the life of today!

"It may not make impossible if we all did our duty, but it makes difficult equality of privilege and opportunity for the negro in his struggle for life, liberty and happiness, in which are included the right to better himself and his family.

Unfairness to Negro.

"It is not race pride or race instinct, but race prjudice augmented by want of character, that brings the negro injustice as between man and man. If I yielded to a natural reluctance to admit distasteful truths, I could not conceal from you the tendency—far too frequent with far too many individuals to deal unfairly in business transactions with the negro because he is helpless. It is manifested in some shopkeepers (particularly those who give credit) and with some farmers in their dealings with negro tenants. It is to an appreciable degree more difficult for a negro than a white man to obtain justice in some of our courts, whether on the civil or the criminal side. I do not believe that our judges are subject to this criticism.

"It is not race instinct but race prejudice augmented by more reprehensible traits that brings to the negro discourteous rudeness, contemptuous insult and corporal ill treatment. The white man's claim of superiority may be readily refuted by the manner in which he asserts it. Insulting another or wounding his feelings is always to be condemned, but never more so than when it comes from a superior to an inferior. A negro dare not insult a white man. Fear restrains him. A more commendable spirit should restrain the white man from daring to insult or maltreat the negro. Let him 'dare do all that may become a man'—remembering that 'who dares do more is none.'"

Lynching Is Not Sectional.

He then spoke of the migration of the negro and pointed out that frequently the negro is not accorded fair treatment by some white men in business, and sometimes does not get justice in the courts. He arraigned lynch law in a powerful, effective manner, but declared that "lynching is not a sectional crime." He pointed the way to opose the Dyer bill's passage and conforcement is to "arouse an enlightened public sentiment which will compel such universal and impartial and fearless administration of the law and protection of the individual as to make federal intervention clearly unnecessary and inexcusable."

Colonel Lawton pointed out the falsity of the opinion that negroes cannot and do not achieve worthy places as students, scholars, writers, business men and orators. He then drew the picture of the negro today:

"Do you realize what a hard fate it is to be a negro? Put yourself in his place and imagine that through no fault of yours, but merely because your skin is black, you are expected to go through life doing your share as a man, a citizen, for yourself, your family, your community, your state and your country, with handicaps and restrictions such as these: You are barred from holding any office and may not serve as a juror. You may not be a clerk. You may work as a porter or waiter on a sleeping car, but never as a conductor or a steward. You may work with white men as a skilled laborer, but never as a foreman. You may work at trades and vocations but, however well you may work, you have no hope of promotion. You are altogether barred from many trades and crafts. You are barred from the principal labor unions. You may be a locomotive fireman, but never an engineer. Whatever your ability to pay, whatever your dress, your habits, or demeanor, you may never use the best facilities provided for public entertainment. These and many other handicaps must be your lot and the lot of your children and your children's children, from the cradle to the grave. Imagine yourself so situated, would you be content to accept it without question? Would you never dream of changing it? Would you cheerfully agree with those who believe that it must ever be?"

Commends Race Commissioners.

He then called attention to the one way in which in Georgia the problem is seriously, earnestly being studied, through the offices of the "commission on interracial co-operation"—as in fourteen other states of the union. He cited the head of the Georgia organizations, Dr. M. Ashby Jones, as a guarantee of the safety of "our most sacred traditions." He told of the work this commission is doing in each Georgia county except where the negro is not present in numbers. The support and the co-operation of all thinking citizens he solicited as the one way open to study the question in Georgia and go as far as possible in its solution. He took occasion to speak of some of the obstacles to this sane manner of going about the business of effecting co-operation and understanding and sympathetic work of the races, scoring the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and its organ, "The Crisis," with some other leaders of the negro press whose influence makes co-operation more difficult. He scored "The Chicago Defender" as another conspicuous exception to the rule of preaching good-will and co-operation as voiced by many of the sane and earnest negroes. He scored as another obstacle the office-seeker who panders to base instincts of race prejudice to further his own ends. He paid his respects, too, to the K. K. K., which, denying hostility to the negro, "presents a serious obstacle to those who" are trying to bring about better relations between the problems introduced by the segregation question, the speaker concluded:

White Men Must Decide.

"The white man is and will continue to be in the ascendency, and the races can co-operate only on terms which the white man will accept. I hope that having the greater power he will be just and liberal; but he will never regard it as just to risk even slightly the perpetual purity of the white race, and liberality will never induce him to abandon his insistence on segregation, but that degree and kind which recognizes race instinct and which race instinct demands.

"I have spoken freely, not hesitating to point to our own shortcomings, but trying to avoid criticism which is merely destructive. I have noted the marked progress of the negro in less than two generations. This and his earlier progress (even with the handicap of slavery) from untutored savagery and paganism indicate capacity for further advance, and give encouragement of success—yes, substantial success, if we awake to full realization that we must be up and doing. The task is difficult, but not hopeless, and it is our task.

"I know that deep down in your hearts you have an affection for the negro. Remember his remarkable record during the civil war. During those four years of trial there was not even one instance of faithlessness by the slaves left to care for the helpless women and children on the plantation. And John Brown called for them in vain. It is a record of which any race should be proud, and I am sure that you are proud of it for them.

Negro Deserves Sympathy.

"We know that we are in the ascendency and that his fate is largely in our hands. We know that as compared with ourselves he is helpless and that he deserves not our criticism, but our sympathetic interest; not our antagonism, but our help and our encouragement. I appeal to each of you for active aid in urging upon your community and your state fair and impartial consideration of this harassing problem; for study of it in the light of tradition; for encouragement and participation in the work of the inter-racial commission; and for a firm determination as men and women on whom higher duty rests that no unfair advantage shall be taken of our power, and that the negro shall always receive that justice and fair treatment which is his due, and which we cannot withhold if we wish to retain our self-respect."

HARDWARE DEALERS OPEN CONVENTION

Richmond, Va., June 19.—Reports of officers and decision to remove the national headquarters from Argos, Ind., to Indianapolis, featured the opening session today of the 24th annual congress of the National Retail Hardware association. Several hundred hardware retailers, jobbers and manufacturers are here for the convention, which will continue through Friday. In his annual address this morning President Charles H. Casey of Jordan, Minn., declared that the railroads of the country need to be let alone. Asserting that it was "too bad that something can not be done to help the farmer," Mr. Casey declared the farmers have produced "a lot of food their families can not consume, but which they can not afford to ship."

"I should like to suggest," Mr. Casey continued, "that labor organizations take note of the ever mounting costs in all lines . . . and instead of giving their thought to getting more and more pay, they reflect on what their situation will be when costs get so high that everything closes down for lack of purchasers."

BY HOMER GEORGE,
(Special Staff Correspondent)

Birmingham, Ala., June 19.—One hundred and eighty-one golfers started in the qualifying round of the southern amateur golf championship play at Roebuck Country club today. Of that number it remained for a slip of a boy of 17, hailing from the city of Selma, Ala., to show the way with the low medal. This youngster is Glenn Crissman, who recently won the Montgomery invitation tournament; and the total he turned in today was 73, just three strokes better than any other made.

Players from the Roebuck club won the team trophy with a total of 319 strokes. This was quite a surprise to golf critics, as it was generally supposed one of the Atlanta clubs would come through. However, the best Atlanta could get in this connection was second and third places. The Druid Hills team finished second with 321 and the Atlanta Athletic club was third with 325.

From all the great gob of players just 64 remain and of these only 32 are in the first division. Tomorrow 16 will be eliminated from the championship flight, leaving an equal number to battle for the title. Unless something so far beyond the predictions of all who watched today's play goes wrong, young Crissman will be among those to try for the title and if it was not for the fact that most medalists are beaten, he would be a favorite to win. This jinx is accounted against him, however, by most followers of golf.

In the drawings, for the play of the first division, Crissman got the initial place in the upper bracket and will meet J. Perry Greene, of Atlanta. He should have no trouble disposing of him, if he plays anything like the golf shown here and displayed at Montgomery during that meet.

At the top of the lower bracket is Bob Baugh, Jr., who has been shooting such wonderful golf here during the past five days and who lost the professional tournament by one stroke. Bob and Glenn played together in qualifying and it is a toss-up as to which would lick the other in a match. Baugh was second, tied with a fellow club mate, Dr. A. B. Harris, in the qualifying round, his medal score being 76.

Crissman Is Favorite.

In the upper bracket with Young Crissman is the boy who has been considered favorite in the tournament, Frank Godchaux, who is playing from Nashville because of the fact that he attends Vanderbilt university, but whose home is in New Orleans. Godchaux was runner-up against Bobby Jones last year and has always been prominent in any kind of match play. His showing last year was wonderful, but he has not been quite so good this season. Today he was missing quite a few of his tee shots, that is was making shots far from satisfactory to him and he says this accounted for his qualifying score of 77.

In this same upper backet are some other very fine golfers who will make it hard for Crissman and Godchaux. For instance, Godchaux has no great cinch in his first match, being called upon to meet Paul F. Haddock, of Charlotte, a sterling golfer, who was recently low medalist in the Pinehurst tournament for the championship of the two Carolinas. He was having quite a lot of trouble today, however, and was not anywhy near his usual game.

Another fine player is Chris Brinke, of Louisville, who put out Perry Adair last year. Charles Black, of Atlanta, is also in this flight, and he will be a hard man to beat. His medal today was 77.

R. P. Lockett, of New Orleans, who shot a 79 and who is a great match player, is in the upper bracket also along with Tess Bradshaw, of Atlanta. Here is a player who is never licked until the final putt drops. F. M. Laxton, winner of the Carolinas title with a 79 today, is likewise in the bracket, with C. V. Rainwater, of Atlanta, one of the gamest players in America. Dr. A. B. Harris, who was tied with Bob Paugh, Jr., for second low medal today is another star in the upper list. Altogether this bracket seems to be the hardest of the two and the winner will surely know he has been playing golf when he gets to the finals.

In the lower bracket Bob Baugh tops the list, but he is not alone in so far as class goes. Perry Adair, always a fine shot, is here. Perry was shooting good golf in spots today. His tee shots were wonders, but he was far from good on his approaches, while on his second shots, he found several traps and bad spots, all of which combined to hold his medal to 81. He ought to do much better in match play. Louis Tachu, of Louisville, a sterling golfer who scored a 77 today, is the first opponent Perry will meet. The winner of this match will likely be the pick to fight it out with Baugh. However, several others are in the bracket who may cause an upset.

T. W. Palmer, of Tampa, is here. He shot 78 today and complained considerably about some fearful luck which befell him. He is a good match player and is accounted as having more than a fair chance. He will meet Baugh Thursday in case both he and the Birmingham boy win their Wednesday matches, which seems most likely.

Atlantan May Cause Surpise.

Mallory C. Jones, of Atlanta, is in the bracket, but will have to show some improvement to be considered seriously against the other stars of the lower list. However he is a thoroughly game, capable player and may cause a surprise.

Chick Ridley, one of the sterling Atlanta golfers, is in the crowd and should have no trouble beating Sax Crawford, of Birmingham, in his first match. Pollock Boyd, the young star from Chattanooga who flashed across the horizon in a brilliant display two years ago, is down here also, as is Jenks Gillem, who surpassed all players today in one respect. Gillem played the second side in a par 33, which is the first time this has been done in about five years. He had a 44 on the first nine, however, and is not really considered a dangerous competitor so far as the championship is concerned, though all admitted he may spill the beans for somebody in case he gets going good for a round or so. He virtually shot his head off today in that second nine and was the sensation of the day. It sounds like the play of a dubb-to-say he was eleven strokes better on one nine than the other, but many players had six to ten the first.

Altogether, it would seem that the winner of the lower bracket will have strokes better on the second nine than a much easier time than the winner of the top list. Unquestionably Bob Baugh, Jr., is the favorite in the lower crowd. He should make a runaway of it against L. A. Monte Donico, whom he meets Wednesday. He will then go against the winner of the T. W. Palmer-Emmett Spicer, Jr., match and should lick either or these. Meanwhile Tachu and Perry Adair will fight a hard battle while Mallory Jones should defeat Val Nesbitt, leaving Baugh to go against the winner who comes from this four, in case he gets by his first two opponents. He certainly seems best of all in his bracket unless there is a fearful upset and he is generally picked as one of the finalists.

Scoring Is High.

In the play today the scoring was high, for the most part, though thirty-four of the scores were 83 or better. Two of the 83 boys lost out in the draw of the first division and fell into the lower class. Five of the 87 players stuck in the second division, thus making all of the sixty-four of the 87 or better class. Considering the difficult course which all acknowledge Roebuck to be, this is not bad, by any means. Roebuck is one of those courses on which the stranger is apt to have a world of trouble until he becomes thoroughly familiar with it. Consequently, the scoring of the day was not disappointing, as a whole.

Most of the dopesters who had been here several days, picked 73 as the low figure for the qualifying round. How thoroughly they had understood the difficulties offered by the course is borne out by the results.

Glenn Crisman shot a fine game to make that score. His drives were straight and around the two-hundred mark all the way, while his putting was excellent on every green but one, the eighth where he had an unexcusable miss. His one bit of really hard luck came on the second where his tee shot hit a tree and he had to take a six on a par four hole. However, he picked up one of these strokes on four where he sank a long putt for a two.

He pulled two or three iron shots, but they did not prove very costly. His putting was a real joy. His card follows:

Out .....463 254 455—38
In .....433 554 434—35—73

Bob Baugh, Jr., qualified with Crissman. I followed these boys most of the way and it was a pleasure to watch their easy play. Baugh had bad luck on four. He says this hole has two eyes and a nose and he always hits one of the eyes, though shooting for the nose. He had a hard run of luck on nine. His drive was hooked into the rough and his second crossed the fairway into more rough. His third barely got him on the fairway. His fourth was on the green and he gave the ball every chance to drop on his putt. It went directly over the hole and his sixth hung on the lip, making him take a seven. On the way in he was just three over par, getting a 76. Dr. A. B. Harris had a 38 out and in, being always consistent.

CARPENTIER-BECKETT FIGHT MAY BE HELD

London, June 19.—The fight between Joe Beckett and Georges Carpentier may yet be held on July 4, as scheduled, in the opinion of some sportsmen. Beckett's injured hand was examined yesterday by a London physician, who was unable to discover that a bone had been broken. The Britisher's complaint is said to be only a muscle contraction, common to all boxers, and it is asserted that if the X-ray examination which Beckett subsequently underwent, confirms this diagnosis, the English heavyweight could put his hand into condition in two days.

However, Beckett has told Sporting Life that he would not fight on July 4, as he would be unable to do himself justice.

Plan Illumination Of Tennis Courts On Local Parks

Decision to install a lighting system in the tennis courts to be erected at Candler Park was reached at a meeting of the Candler park development commitee held Monday at the residence of Grover C. Adams, 72 Thelma street. Carlton Y. Smith, many times southern tennis champion, will supervise the construction of the courts and the lighting, the latter to cost about $500. The object is to provide facilities for recreation for men and women who are, through business and other reasons, unable to play during the day.

President H. F. MacDuffy, of the Piedmont Golf association, presided at a meeting Tuesday at Piedmont park which went on record as favoring installation of lights on several of the 10 courts now in use at this park. It is understood that Harry York, chairman of the parks committee of the city council, and L. L. Wallace, general manager of city parks, are strongly in favor of the project, as is also Mayor Walter Sims. Estes Bussey, vice president of the American Institute of Electrical Engineering, supplied the specifications.

Calloway signed with the Knoxville team after he had been made a free agent by Connie Mack, after a deal whereby he should go to the Milwaukee club of the American association fell through.

HAWKES GOES TO THE VOLS

Nashville, Tenn., June 19.—(Special.)—So desperate has Skipper James Hamilton become in his efforts to lead his bewildered Vols back towards the high country that he was churning up a trade with Jonathan Dobbs which may annex Padgett, of the Chicks.

The cookup fell flat as a flounder. Chicks wanted an outfielder. So Hamilton went shopping and secured Chicken Hawks from St. Paul. What will be done with Hawks now that the trade has collapsed is not known.

Jonathan Dobbs first wanted Bevo Lebourveau for Padgett. The Vol skipper balked at such a swap, even though the California gent for some time has been in the bog with the bludgeon. But every avenue in the majors which had a third-sacker at its end has been close to the Vol skipper. Hence the Vols offered Hawks for Padgett.

Hawks already has accepted terms with the Vols and is booked to join them during the stay in Birmingham.

Once With Yankees.

Chicken Hawks was with the Yanks once and performed in Vernon livery a year back with Tony Faeth, whose brilliant box work Sunday was allowed to go to seed because his mates were unable to even invent a sacrifice fly.

Out on the coast, where the curving is very confusing, Chicken Hawks swatted for a .279 mark in 121 games. He hammered in 51 tallies and banged 15 triples off hostile heavers.

This summer he has been used at first base by St. Paul, to which club he was peddled by the coast moguls. He has been very useful with the ash and James Hamilton believes he will fit in satisfactorily, even if it becomes necessary to brave a storm of protest from the squadron of admirers which Lebourveau has clustered about him.

Some time ago Padgett wrote Chris Mathewson, so Henry told James Hamilton, that he was dissatisfied at Memphis. The Vol boss believes the Sally star will be satisfied to play with the Vols.

Something must be done to revive the fading Hamilton folks. They are playing with timidity. Too cautious. Gone is the daring. Their spirit is sagging. They lack the old vigor—for they are half beaten before they don their spiked boots. Such a run of adversity has drained the reservoir of their courage.

SIKI GIVEN FINE BY FRENCH JUDGE

Paris, June 19.—(By the Associated Press.)—Battling Siki, the Senegalese heavyweight, today was fined 300 francs and roundly lectured in police court for firing a revolver in a safe, punching the nose of a waiter and insulting the policeman who arrested him. The judge added five francs for drunkenness.

Siki grinned broadly as he listened to the good advice from the bench, gave a military salute and shook hands with everyone in the courtroom except the judge, who took refuge in flight. The fighter then walked out, followed by the hundreds who had packed the courtroom expecting the jail sentence which the court had promised if Siki was ever again haled before it.

Bill Bailey, Local Fighter, Held to Draw by 'Kid' Suby, Hard Hitting Columbus Boy

Hollis Sullivan Given Draw With Harry Allen, of Macon, But Decision Proves Unpopular—Baby Stribling Loses

BY CLIFF WHEATLEY.

Promoters of box fighting for the 108th cavalry entertained pugilistic customers at a surprise party last night at Spiller's bowl. Here are four of the surprises:

Lew Suver stopped Kid Peck, the Columbus slugger, cold as a mackerel in the second round of their scheduled ten-round embroglio.

Kid Suby, Fort Benning middleweight, fought toe to toe with Battling Bill Bailey and held Atlanta's hardest puncher to a draw.

Hollis Sullivan, Atlanta youngster, not only failed to dispose of Harry Allen, Macon fighter, in ten rounds, but was barely able to share in a decision that was not well received by the spectators who thought the Bibb county entry won.

Baby Stribling lost in four rounds to Young Collins, Atlanta youth, who displayed remarkable improvement over recent starts and now bids fair to be one of the best-liked preliminary boys in this section.

It was the first all-star card sponsored by the cavalrymen and its success warrants more of them. A corking good crowd turned out to see the most torrid battles that have been staged in Atlanta in months and every bout was worth the price of admission. It's true this time that a good time was had by all, as the old-fashioned society editors used to say.

Knockout Is Unexpected.

Of the four big shocks given the fans, Silver's quick knockout over his opponent was the greatest. Wise money, or much of it, was riding on the shoulders of the Columbus lad as he climbed through the ropes. He had fought in Atlanta but once or twice and it was hard for the boys who are supposed to know about these things to believe that Silver would be able to keep out of the way long enough to win on points.

Few believed Silver would win. Not one in that great crowd, unless it was good old Cy Young, who told me before the fight he felt down in his heart that Lew Silver would polish off the south Georgian, believed the Atlantan would score a knockout. Some began to dream of a knockout in the first round when they saw that Silver was in wonderful condition, ready to wage the battle of his young life, but that they were not prepared for the quick end that was reached in the second.

Silver, ably coached by Jake Abel, that veteran of a thousand ring encounters, started the second with an attack to the body. He had played higher in the previous round and discovered that Peck's jaw was not as fragile as a lot of people chose to think. Jake's choice was a wise one, for Peck, who had fought a ten-round bout only the night before, was not in the proper condition to stand up under such an assault.

The end came shortly after one minute of the second had rolled away. The blow that really finished the fight was delivered while the boys were fighting at close range. It was a smashing right straight over the heart and Peck's knees wobbled as Silver's glove found the target. Like all smart warriors do when they are hurt, Peck grabbed for Silver, but the Atlanta youngster was not to be denied. He jerked out of the clinch, the force of his effort sending Peck headlong into the ropese.

Hold Consultation.

His face covered with blood from an old wound that had been opened earlier in this round, Peck presented a sorry sight as he was drawn back into the ring by Referee Gallagher, who for some unknown reason declined to start a count. Finally Peck slumped to the canvas and Gallagher began tolling off the numbers. When he reached nine he received instructions from one of the judges to halt the count. Then followed a consultation between judges and officials. It was announced that Peck would be given a chance to recover, this announcement proving unsatisfactory to the spectators.

While frantic efforts were being made to bring around the visiting pugilist, a towel was tossed in from his corner, Peck's seconds stating that he would not be able to continue the contest. The fans were then notified that the judges had decided to award the decision to Silver on a knockout in the second round. It was stated by those in charge of Peck that his head had struck the framework of the ring as he went through the ropes.

After being badly hurt by Bailey's crashing right in the first round, Suby came back in fine fashion against the Atlantan in their ten-round battle and toward the close it appeared that he would be returned a winner, but Bailey did some rallying himself in the ninth round, evened the fight and held his own in the last. The decision rendered was the only one possible under the circumstances and was eminently correct.

Suby Takes Lead.

Bailey won the first round handily, but Suby forged into the lead by taking the second and third. Bailey was on the verge of taking the count in the second, but Shby either didn't realize the local boy's condition or was unable to put across the finisher.

KILLINGER INJURED AS CRACKERS DEFEAT LOOKOUTS

Herman Sent to Outfield And Barber Goes to First In Shake-up of Crackers

Given Generous Lead by Mates, George Dumont is Knocked Out by Chattanooga Team, But Tuero Holds Enemy.

BY HENRY ALLEN.

A young gentlemen by the name of Ballou, who flips 'em over for the Chattanooga Lookouts and who has been doing enough flipping this year to be classed as one of the leading pitchers in the Southern league, was a very much surprised young man yesterday before the second game of the Cracker-Chattanooga series had gone into the record book.

Mr. Ballou was sailing along in handy fashion for the first four innings and it looked like the Crackers were doomed for another licking, but the home boys' heavy hitting soon got under way and the locals chalked up an 11-to-4 win.

It is safe to say that Ballou hasn't the nicest opinion of little Johnny Ring, the Crackers' jack-at-all-trades, who helped the locals' rally along in the fifth inning when he smashed out his second home run of the season to the sighboards in left field, scoring Herman and Barber in front of him.

This was the last straw for Ballou, for the Crackers, after this inning, never failed to hit safely and although he managed to keep the scoring down with the exception of the sixth and eighth innings, the sensational fielding of his teammates had lots to do with this.

Everybody then started hitting Mr. Ballou. Even "Casey" Tuero, the Cuban flinger, who relieved George Dumont in the fifth inning, whacked a clean double to left field. "Casey" astonished his staunchest supporters by accomplishing this feat.

George Dumont was booked for mound duty and it seemed at first that Georgie had the Lookouts baffled. He succeeded in holding down the score until the fifth inning, when four hits netted three runs and seriously threatened the Crackers' five-run lead. Then Dumont gave way to Tuero, who held the Lookouts in fine style and allowed but three well scattered hits in four innings.

The Cracker line-up was a very much changed affair from what has been presented to the fans this season. Turner Barber was shifted from right field to first base, while "Babe" Herman, who has been holding down the first sack all season, was sent to the outfield.

Killinger Injured.

Cliff Yockey was out of the game at the start and Johnny Ring was pressed into service at the keystone, but Glenn Killinger, the star third sacker, was badly spiked in his left arm during the third when Bates slid into third and was forced to give way to Ring, while Yockey was sent back to his regular position at second.

Killinger was carried to Grady hospital where it was found that one of the arteries had been severed. It was necessary to take several stitches. He will probably be out of the game for several days, but physicans stated he would probably be ready to play in the New Orleans series next week.

Herman got along fairly well in right field. He had two chances which he handled perfectly, but misjudged Bates' high one in the second inning and the Lookout drew into port at third before the ball could be fielded.

The Crackers are keeping up their average of a home run every day. The honors of yesterday go to Joe Guyon and Johnny Ring. Guyon placed his sixth circuit clout of the season over the fight field fence, while Johnny's went to left field sign boards.

Eddie Moore was right there with the goods again when it came to fielding. His catch of Bates' line drive in the second inning was sensational.

The Lookouts were first to score when they pushed across one run in the third inning. Hindt, first up, grounded out to Barber and Ballou struck out. Clayton then singled sharply to right field. Bates hit one against the right field fence for three bases scoring Clayton. Killinger was spiked as Bates slid into the bag.

The Crackers' first big inning was the fourth when Moore walked and stole second. Guyon struck out but Yockey singled over second base and Moore scored. Herman beat out an infield hit. Mike Burke fouled out to Nunamaker. Yockey and Herman both advanced a base on Ballou's wild pitch. Barber hit to Bates at short who juggled the ball and Yockey scored and Herman went to third. Johnny Ring then crashed his home run scoring Herman and Barber. Brock went out Ballou to C. Anderson, retiring the side.

Lookouts Rallied.

The Lookouts then staged a rally which fell short by one run of tying the score. Hindt struck out, but Ballou hit one up the bank in the right field for three bases. Clayton followed suit scoring Ballou. Bates singled to center field scoring Clayton. C. Anderson singled sharply over the mound into center and Mike Burke let the ball get by him, Bates raced home but C. Anderson was out at the plate, making a desperate effort to score. Leonard went out. Yockey to Barber, retiring the side. This ended the Chattanooga scoring.

Five more runs were added to the Crackers' total in the sixth. Mike Burke lifted to J. Anderson for the first out, but Barber singled to center on the first ball pitched. Ring went out Hindt to C. Anderson and Barber went to second. Brock walked and both runners advanced on a wild pitch by Ballou. Tuero then doubled to left scoring Brock and Barber. Eddie Moore singled to center scoring Tuero. Guyon hit his sixth home run of the season over the rightfield fence. Yockey grounded out, retiring the side.

The Crackers' final score came in the eighth when Ring singled to left. Brock and Tuero both went out. Moore doubled to center scoring Ring. Guyon retired the side by grounding out, Leonard to C. Anderson.

The Crackers added three more double plays to their total yesterday which gives them 54. They are now well in advance of all other teams in the Southern.

Bennie Karr, the Crackers' pitching ace, who is used in the role of pinch hitter, was called upon to hit for Dumont and singled over second. Karr is leading all the batters in the Southern league this year in pinch hitting. He is well over the 300 mark for a general average.

BARONS 15, VOLS 14.

Birmingham, Ala., June 19.—The Barons won an overtime, oversized baseball game from the Vols here today by a score of 15 to 14. The game went 10 innings and was a nerve-racking contest from the sixth inning. The Vols ran six men around the circuit in the first innings on four hits and two errors but the Barons regained half that amount in their half when D. Clarke smacked one over rightfield fence with two on. The Vols forged ahead in the sixth when five men scored on five hits, but the Barons came back in the seventh with three more. The Vols tied it again in the eighth when

PRESS TEAMS PLAY TODAY

BY M. D. GLEASON.

There will be two unusually good games in the Press league today and the public is cordially invited to attend either of them.

The Constitution will play the L. W. Rogers team at Almand park or the River car line, game beginning at 2 o'clock and the Journal will play the Georgia Railway transportation team at the Fulton Bag grounds on East Fair street at 3:30 o'clock.

The Georgian team of this league has an off day.

The rivalry between these teams is very intense and they play the old game for all it is worth. As The Constitution is leading the league, their game with the Rogers people will be hard fought today.

Both teams will present their strongest line up and two of the best right hand pitchers now in Atlanta will oppose each other. Henry, The Constitution pitching ace, will take the mound and Arthur Hasty, now connected with Rogers, who has not lost a game this season, will hurl for the Rogers people.

In the Journal-Street Car Men game, two good left handers, Billy Munday for the Journal, and Bradshaw for the Transportation team will probably be opposing pitchers.

Both of these boys are good. Munday having won several games for the University of Georgia and Bradshaw winning several games for the World's Fair.

As these games are free they offer the opportunity to everybody to spend a pleasant afternoon.

CARTERSVILLE WINS IN 11TH

Cartersville, Ga., January 19.—(Special.) In a thrilling eleven inning game here Tuesday afternoon Cartersville defeated the fast team from Calhoun by the score of 2 to 1. The pitching of Stevens for the locals and McWhorter for the visitors was nothing less than sensational, Stevens giving up only three hits and McWhorter four.

Stevens fanned nine of the visiting batsmen, demonstrating his best pitching in the eleventh inning when Simpson, first man up for Calhoun in that inning, doubled to left center with a stinger. The next two batters fanning while the third went out, Stevens to Shores.

For the visitors the fielding of Knowles at first was sensational, while for the locals the fielding of "Red" Barron and the catching of "Pug" Bryant was all that could be desired. Freeman's hitting was another outstanding feature. This game was the third of a series, Cartersville winning two out of the three.

Winner of J. Smith-Greb Bout Will Meet McTigue

Will Battle McTigue in August and Johnny Wilson in September at Square Garden.

When Harry Greb and Jeff Smith square off against each other out at Doc Provano's rapidly arising Lakewood arena there will be something more at stake besides the rich purse offered them by the Atlanta promoters, and the feeding fat of the ancient grudge they bear each other. They will be waging warfare to decide which one of them will get a whack at two of the richest events on Tex Rickard's sporting calendar.

The winner of the Atlanta combat will get a crack first at Mike McTigue, light-heavyweight champion of the world, in Madison Square Garden in August. The man whose glove is held aloft at Lakewood will also get a chance to topple the middleweight crown off the head of Johnny Wilson in September. These assurances have been given the combatants by no less a personage than Rickard himself.

These advices were received Tuesday by Doc Provano from Al Lippe, manager of Smith. "I am not going over to Philadelphia with Jeff," Lippe wrote the Doc from New York. "I had to stay over here to talk with Rickard and I came away with his promise that if Jeff beats Greb in Atlanta he will give him the chance to meet both McTigue and Wilson that we have been working toward for a year.

His Only Obstacle.

"As I see it, the Atlanta fight is the only thing that stands between Jeff and the double barrelled championship.

"McTigue has always been duck soup for Jeff and I have always known that Jeff could beat Wilson with one hand. So you can know that I'll have him right for Greb—and he'll get Greb too.

"Don't forget that, When Jeff fought Greb in New Orleans we felt that we hadn't all that was coming to us, when the battle was called to a draw. When we get together in Atlanta, there'll be no chance of a draw—and I am writing you this in face of the fact that I believe Greb one of the greatest pieces of fighting machinery alive."

CLARKE PITCHES TYGERS TO WIN.

Charlotte, N. C., June 19.—Pitching sterling ball in the pinches, when he turned Charlotte's hardest hitters back without safeties when hits would have deprived him of his game, Clarke, given superb support by his teammates, evened the series between the Hornets and Tigers by a count of 7 to 3 today. Somewhat ragged support by the Hornets aided the visitors in defeating Brown.

Development of Yale Crew This Year Is Startling

If Yale Should Win Over Harvard in Long Race, Dope Will Be Completely Upset, Says Camp.

New York, June 19.—There has been nothing in college athletics this year which has bulked larger than the startling developments made in Yale rowing under Coach Leader, who formerly coached the crews of the University of Washington.

If Yale comes through at New London on June 2, with a clean-cut victory over Harvard, and shows that her crew can row the 4-mile distance, at the same time displaying the ability and stamina shown in the shorter races, it will mean nothing less than a complete upset of opinions that have almost come to be regarded in the minds of some rowing men basic facts.

Harvard, for example, anonunced in mid-season that thereafter separate crews would be trained for the short and long distances. Assertions galore have been made for the last few years that a crew training for a 4-mile race could not possibly be expected to win over the shorter distances and consequently must accept defeat in the short races if it looked forward to victory in the longer grind of the 4-mile contests.

Should conditions be favorable at New London, and should Leader's crew row the 4 miles against Harvard in what could be considered fast time, then the coach's triumph would be most complete, for the same Leader crew has already defeated Pennsylvania, Columbia, Princeton and Cornell in the shorter distances.

The striking part of all this to the rowing enthusiast, however, is that Leader has brought to Yale a stroke with most interesting features, and has taught it to old men and new men, to men with rowing experience and of not experience alike. He has been able to make the Yale boat travel faster and to bring in his boatload in impresively good condition.

Stroke Proves Itself.

The stroke taught by Leader has proved itself before. It has its derivation with Hiram Conibear, the man who coached the crews at Washintgon for many years. Conibear had a wide experience in coaching and training athletes even before he became associated with college athletics.

Leader has shown the complete verification of his former mentor's theories in the shorter races. If he demonstrates that his men can keep up this stroke, not ten of eleven minutes, but twenty to twenty-five, he will have proved that a crew may be trained and conditioned not only for 2 miles, but for 4 miles.

The impressive part about the stroke is the absence of any superfluous work or expenditure of energy.

It is all rhythmic, smooth, non-exhausting and yet steady power is applied in the most advantageous way for pushing the boat forward. The stroke takes all the advantage of a fairly long slide and makes use of the powerful leg muscles which, applied at the right moment, do so much to drive the shell forward. There is a delicate, sensitive reach for a moderate amount of water into which the oar bites clearly. The power is applied immediately and carried well through.

Any one who goes to the race at New London will be interested in seeing from personal observation whether the theories of Conibear and Leader are applicable to the 4-mile journey.

Harvard's improvement in the last week has been quite marked, and this not only adds to the interest of the race, but will assure a real test of the Leader stroke under fierce competition.

PLANS FIGHT FOR P. VILLA

New York, June 19.—Plans already are under way, according to Tom O'Rourke, Polo grounds match maker, for another world's flyweight title bout, bringing together Pancho Villa, the new champion who toppled Jimmy Wilde from the throne last night, and Frankie Genaro, of New York, who won the American 112-pound crown from the Filipino last March. Villa has signed a contract for the match, which O'Rourke plans to stage about September 1.

Though still weak and bruised from the terriffic punishment he absorbed in losing his title to Villa, Wilde was declared today by physicians to be in no danger from his injuries. Propped up in bed in his Jersey City quarters, the little Welshman, who was hailed by critics as one of the gamest batlers of all time, was able to receive a few of his close friends.

Wilde's left eye was closed, his right eye nearly so and besides a gash on his cheek, a cut four inches long on his chin testified to the force with which he plunged to the canvas from Villa's knockout blow in the seventh round.

Revised figures today on the championship bout, announced by promoters, placed the paid attendance at 23,000 and receipts at $94,590, considerably below the total of 40,000 for the crowd and $160,000 as estimated last night. On the basis of the new figures, Wilde's share, 37 1-3 per cent, was about $36,000 and Villa's 12 1-2 per cent amounted to $12,000.

"I'm proud of the wrapper, too"

WHEN you come to the last delightful inch of your La Palina, when you see that there are no ragged, half-charred edges, when you reflect that it has burned steadily and evenly since the instant you lighted it, I'll warrant that you do not realize how much the wrapper had to do with this particular part of your enjoyment.

There is no tobacco in the world like the wrapper used on La Palina. When you take a leaf of this pliant, delicately veined tobacco in your hand, you can feel instantly its wonderful texture—light, elastic and yet strong. If you set fire to the center of the leaf it is completely consumed, burning steadily in all directions, giving off the faintest delightful aroma. Every inch of it is superb tobacco.

There is no secret concerning the cost of such tobacco. It is the most expensive wrapper that can be put on a cigar. But I know that it is the only wrapper that will combine with and do justice to the fine, imported tobaccos in the La Palina filler. And so long as I am certain that there is produced no wrapper better than this I shall continue to use it for La Palina.

DR. PARKER MADE HEAD OF FOOD AND DRUG MEN

Dr. H. N. Parker, of Jacksonville, Fla., was elected president of the Association of Food and Drug Men of the Southeastern States last night at a banquet at the Ansley hotel which closed the annual convention after a two-day session here.

Other officers named were as follows: Miss Bennett Stewart, of Atlanta, vice president; A. M. Henry, of Tallahassee Fla., secretary, executive committee; Dr. J. H. Heard, of Winston-Salem, N. C.; Dr. A. C. Summers, of Columbia, S. C., and Dr. Joseph Calloway, of Savannah.

Before adjourning resolutions of thanks were passed to the governor, citizens of Georgia, Retiring President Wilson, Mr. Bodenheimer, Commissioner J. J. Brown, U. S. department of agriculture, bureau of chemistry, and the newspapers of the city.

The Night Session.

Speakers at the night session included J. O. Halverson, of the department of agriculture, Raleigh, N. C.; B. J. Owen, assistant state chemist, of Tallahassee, Fla.; A. M. Henry, assistant state chemist, Tallahassee, Fla., and J. E. Bodenheimer, state food inspector, of Atlanta.

The general subject of discussion was "Feeds," and Mr. Halverson gave an exhaustive report on the work of the Feed Control Officials' association. Mr. Owen discussed the problems faced by a stock food analyst.

Mr. Henry developed important points in his paper on "The Maturity of Citrus Fruit," while Mr. Bodenheimer led a symposium on "Uniformity of Laws, Rules and Regulations." He urged the adoption by the different states of uniform food control laws and pointed out how such a condition would tend toward more perfect enforcement of these laws.

J. J. Browns Speaks.

J. J. Brown, commissioner of agriculture for Georgia, featured the Tuesday morning session, held in the senate chamber at the state capitol, by his speech on milk control for municipalities. He called for rigid enforcement of all pure food and drug laws, with particular reference to the proper inspection of milk supplies, pointing out how vital this was because of the large amount of milk consumed by young children.

Commissioner Brown, in reviewing the work of the Georgia food and drug inspection department, which comes under the general direction of his department, expressed the belief that the work of these inspectors has saved the lives of thousands of Georgians, as well as protecting the health of the entire state, by condemning polluted and adulterated products, and preventing their distribution and sale in the state.

Other speakers at the morning session included Dr. J. H. Heald, city health officer of Winston-Salem, N. C., and Dr. H. W. Parker, city chemist and bacteriologist, of Jacksonville, Florida.

On Tuesday afternoon delegates to the convention were entertained by the local committee with an automobile ride to the United States prison and to Stone mountain.

SHIEK OF SCREEN WILL GIVE TROPHY TO BEST DANCERS

Rodolph Valentino, shiek of the screen, who will appear in person with his wife, Winifred Hudnut, in a feature dance program at the auditorium on Friday night will present the best fox-trot artists in Atlanta in a contest which will be held at the auditorium in connection with the dance program. To the winning couple Valentino will give a beautiful silver trophy.

Advance inquiry for tickets to the Valentino performance indicates that there will be a heavy rush for seats when they are placed on sale at the Cable Piano company Wednesday morning. Unless all signs fail, the local management is confident that standing room will be at a premium before the seat sale has progressed many hours.

Unusual interest has been created by the coming of Valentino here, and a number of other southern cities are now making an effort to land him for a performance, as there are thousands of his admirers who wish to see the film actor and his beautiful wife behind the footlights.

The funds will be used to pay off an issue of 7 per cent bonds now outstanding against the steamship corporation.

German Veteran Says Larsen Paid For Burning Plant

New York, June 19.—Ernest Buell, German war veteran, ended eight hours on the witness stand this afternoon, still clinging to his story that he had fired the J. L. Aircraft corporation plant at Central Park, Long Island, last February, at the bidding of John L. Larsen, famous airplane inventor and builder, so that Larsen might collect $190,000 insurance.

Heckled and grilled by Larsen's counsel who declared the defense would unfold a "most amazing conspiracy" to wreck Larsen's reputation, Buell admitted he had received weekly payments from a detective agency employed by the Commercial Union Insurance company, limited, which is suing Larsen for recovery of $18,000 paid him on a fire policy, but insisted his story of having been hired by Larsen to fire the plant was true.

William J. Fallon, Larsen's counsel, told the jury he would prove that the action against Larsen was a plot set on foot after Larsen had protested the award of the commercial airplane trophy to C. B. Wrightman, the son of a wealthy Oklahoma oil man, and known as "the millionaire baby."

Tax Revision Problem Open Forum Will Be Held Here June 29

F. H. Abbott, secretary of the Georgia association, announced Tuesday on his return from the funeral of George Betts, recently deceased president of that organization that the open forum discussion of the tax revision problem in Georgia had been postponed from next Thursday until June 29.

Members of the incoming legislature, Governor-elect Clifford M. Walker and other leading citizens of the state who had planned to attend the discussion, have already been advised of the change in date.

The original program, with the same speakers leading the discussions, will be followed on the new date, as had been planned for next Thursday.

DANGER SIGNALS OF INDIGESTION

The Disease That Strikes Like Lightning.

Beware of indigestion—the disease that kills more people and kills them quicker than any other. This warning, by physicians, is particularly applicable this season of the year, when your system "lets down" in tone and vigor with the first approach of warm weather.

What are the warnings that nature gives you of the approach of indigestion? The medical books tell us: 1. Gas, which means that your food is fermenting instead of digesting. 2. A feeling of fullness or oppression in the region of the stomach after eating. This means that the gas has ballooned your stomach and is pressing up against your heart and lungs. 3. A dull, lazy feeling, which means that you are not getting nourishment from what you are eating. 4. Restlessness, un-refreshing sleep, which means that the poisons of indigestion are disturbing your brain and nerves. 5. Sometimes, pain and fluttering around the heart, though this symptom may come later.

Don't take chances with indigestion—you are too apt to lose. If you have had any of the symptoms mentioned above, get your digestive organs to work at once with Dan-Nax, the greatest prescription that was ever written for a digestive tonic. Dan-Nax immediately aids and assists every one of your digestive organs, including the stomach, liver and bowels. Dan-Nax makes your digestion "perfect and complete." You feel its helpful effect from the very first dose. Get a bottle of Dan-Nax today at any drug store. The cure consists of injections of serum of a graduated series of streptococcus viridane which doctors who discovered the treatment declared is acknowledged to be the underlying cause of rheumatism.

Announcement of the cure followed closely the revelation by radiologists of the Bellevue Hospital laboratories of a new treatment of cancer, whereby x-rays of 250,000 voltage are used for long periods of time on cancer-infected regions of the body. Miss Anna Ellin, first patient to be thus treated, was reported today to be steadily improving.

ADVOCATE WIDENING OF FORREST AVENUE

Decision to advocate the widening of Forrest avenue from Peachtree to Boulevard was reached at a meeting last night of property owners of Forrest avenue held in the office of Dr. E. C. Thrash, 79 Forrest avenue. It was pointed out that the proposed widening would lessen the congestion of traffic on Forrest avenue and improve its value as a business street.

So far as was known there is no opposition by the property owners concerned and every one present, about 75 per cent of those interested, signed a petition in favor of the project.

The width of the street at present is 50 feet and does not permit automobiles to pass street cars. It is planned to add 10 feet on each side, making the proposed thoroughfare 70 feet wide.

Dr. Thrash was elected chairman of the general committee and J. M. Reisman appointed secretary. A committee of five was selected to confer with the county commissioners and the civic authorities.

Cooper-Inman Marriage Is Brilliant Social Event

The marriage of Miss Mildred McChesters Cooper, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cooper, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Hugh Theodore Inman, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hamilton Inman, of Atlanta, was solemnized Tuesday evening with an impressive dignity with beauty at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Samuel Martin Inman, on Peachtree street, in the presence of distinguished and representative friends and relatives.

The ceremony was performed at 9 o'clock by the Rev. J. Sprole Lyons, who wore the Presbyterian ministerial robes in which he was ordained doctor of divinity at Princeton university. The bridal couple stood in the wide hall before a canopied altar formed of smilax and palms. Ropes of smilax garlanded the canopy and ended in tall pedestal baskets of Easter lilies showered with lilies of the valley.

Every detail about the wedding reproduced, so far as was possible, the wedding of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cooper, which took place in this lovely home in 1893.

An unique feature of this interesting marriage was the reception by radio of the wedding march played in the First Presbyterian church, of which the bridal couple are members, by Charles Sheldon, the organist, simultaneously with the music of Enrico Leide's orchestra in the Inman home. As the first strains of the Lohengrin wedding march began the bridal party descended the broad stairway passing through an aisle formed of garlands of smilax linking together tall baskets filled with Easter lilies.

Bridal Party.

The bridesmaids were Miss Anne Grant, a cousin of the bride; Miss Connie Nixon, Miss Jennie Robinson and Miss Mary Shedden. They were charming gowns of daffodil yellow chiffon combined with lace and fashioned in the period of the sixties with full flowing skirts and tight, sleeveless bodices. At the left side was a bow of Turquoise blue silver ribbon. They carried scarf bouquets of yellow and blue snapdragons, daisies and bluets. These lovely bouquets were arranged in floral drapery over the arm and were strikingly beautiful and graceful. Miss Louise Inman, the bride's cousin and maid of honor, wore a gown of turquoise blue chiffon with entre deux of lace and fashioned like those of the bridesmaids, differing only in the color. A choux of silver ribbon ornamented the left side of the bodice. Her bouquet was fashioned entirely of yellow flowers and was made of snapdragons, daisies and gladoli.

Miss Cordelia Brumby, of Marietta, the cousin of the bride and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brumby, was trainbearer and wore a frock of white georgette and lace. Over one shoulder was a garland of flowers.

Harry Bewick, a cousin of the groom, was best man. The groomsmen were Marshall Foster, John Grant, Jr., Jack Byerly, Joseph Walter Cooper, Jr., and Samuel Inman Cooper, of Philadelphia, brothers of the bride.

Beautiful Bride.

The lovely young bride came down the stairs with her father, Joseph Cooper, of Philadelphia. She was radiantly lovely in her wedding robes of white silk tulle enveloped in the the wonderful veil of silk point desprit combined with rare point applique. The wedding gown was modeled after one worn in the family many years ago and was of unusual beauty. The very full skirt was fashioned with row after row of infinitesimally small puffs extending quite to the waist. The tight and severe little bodice was made of white taffetas and finished at the waist line by a garland of orange blossoms worn by the bride's mother on her wedding day. Each orange blossom was centered with brilliants. The round neck sloped from the shoulders in the fashion of long ago and was finished with a bertha of point d'Angleterre, caught on the left shoulder with a cluster of orange blossoms. This priceless lace was an heirloom in the family of Mrs. Samuel Inman, the bride's grandmother. The lovely tissue gown was built over a foundation of tulle threaded with rhinestone fireflies which gleamed softly through the filmy material and sparkled and shone with each step in alluring fashion. A chaplet of orange blossoms across the forehead held the lace veil in place, and was finished at the back of the dark brown head with a fan-shaped arrangement of the lace. The veil formed the court train which extended in graceful folds in soft lengths. The "something old" which every bride must carry was a rare handkerchief of real lace and finest hand-embroidery given to the young bride's grandmother by the great-grandmother of the groom, the late Mrs. William Fitten.

She carried a bridal bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley arranged in exquisite shower effect. She wore the groom's gift, a necklace and pendant of diamonds and a bar pin of diamonds fashioned of rare stones presented to her on her graduation and originally belonging to her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Cooper, of Philadelphia.

Reception Follows.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom took their places in the south drawing room standing in the exact spot where Mr. and Mrs. Cooper stood on their wedding day 30 years ago. They stood in front of a great bank of palms and tropical plants which formed a charming background for them and for the members of the receiving party. Tall siver vases filled with pale pink gladioli were used as floral decorations in this room. Flame-colored gladioli gave vivid spots of color throughout the lower floor. On the wide verandas were placed banks of palms and rare potted plants forming an entrance of green beauty through which the guests entered the house.

In the dining room where the bride's table was placed a color scheme of white and green was used. The table was covered with a cloth of rare lace over a white satin foundation. In the center of the round table was placed a miniature fountain through which rainbow colored lights flashed their soft beauty over a tiny sunken garden of Easter lilies and white gladioli. Silver vases filled with lilies of the valley were placed at intervals about the table and alternated with Silver candlesticks holding white candles. The place cards were wedding bells caught with fluffy bows of orange blossoms and tulle and each bore a painting suggestive of a wedding. Small satin boxes filled with wedding cake and bearing the initials of bride and groom were given as favors. The wedding cake was placed on a table in the wide hall, carrying out the same detail as that of the bride's mother's wedding. The cake which was in the shape of a deep ring was cut with a knife used for generations in the bride's family. The handle was tied with a bow of tulle and orange blossoms. In the center of the cake was placed a miniature bride surrounded with bride's roses and lilies of the valley. One of the symbols in the cake was the small gold ring cut from the bride's mother's cake by a beloved friend and returned to the bride for her own cake.

The bride's gifts to her bridesmaids were jade bracelets encased in white satin boxes bearing the initial of each bridesmaid. The groom presented his attendants with initialed gold pencils.

Many Georgeous Gifts.

Many gorgeous gifts were displayed in the upstairs library. Among these was an antique silver service bearing the date of 1807, the gift of Mrs. Edward Inman, the groom's mother; a chest of silver from the bride's family; a massive silver centerpiece from Captain James W. English and many other beautiful and valuable silver articles.

A bit of sentiment was atached to a souvenir presented by Mrs. John W. Grant and combining the invitations to the wedding of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Inman, the groom's grandparents, and dated May 23, 1871, and to that of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Inman, the groom's parents, the anniversary of whose wedding was celebrated last evening at the marriage of their son, with the invitation to the marriage of the present bride and groom.

Another interesting gift was the mah-jongg set brought by the bride's brothers from China, where they visited on their tour of the world, returning in time for the wedding.

During the reception the bride tossed her bouquet from the arcade

Prominent among the series of lovely June weddings was that of Miss Dorothy Lee Hagan to Joseph Franklin Williams, which took place at 6 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Hagan, on Springdale road.

Bishop Warren A. Candler performed the ceremony.

Beautiful Setting.

Leading to the altar in the drawing room of the handsome home where the ceremony was performed an aisle was formed by tall standards filled with snapdragons and sweetpeas in pastel shades. The altar of palms was interspersed with the same flowers and was flanked on either side with cathedral candelabra holding white tapers.

Quantities of natural orange blossoms, sent from Florida for the wedding, were a special feature of the decorations.

The Howard theater orchestra, under the direction of Enrico Leide, rendered the wedding music. Preceding the ceremony Miss Harriet Small, contralto, sang "All For You."

Bridal Party.

To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march the bridal party descended the stairs, preceded by the ribbon bearers, little Misses Ruth Dodd and Lula Lewis, who crossed the living room forming the aisle with white satin ribbon caught to the standards on either side of the stairway. They wore cream net frocks with wide ribbon sashes, one of pink and the other of blue, with ribbon bandeaux to match their sashes. Entering first was the maid of honor, Miss Julienne Hagan, sister of the bride, whose lovely gown was of orchid chiffon over orchid satin. It was fashioned with straight and simple lines and girdled with cloth of silver. Silver slippers and a bandeaux of silver completed her costume. Her flowers were a cascade bouquet of sweet peas in pastel shades.

Preceding the bride came the little flower girl, Nell Pierson, a cousin of the bride, daintily gowned in bird's egg blue chiffon trimmed in rose pink ribbon. She carried a white Marie Antoinette flower basket filled with pink roses, the handle caught with sweetheart roses.

Charming Bride.

Descending the stairway alone the lovely bride entered the drawing room with her father, Lee Hagan, who gave her in marriag. She prsntd a charming batteau neck line was banded in white chiffon, elaborately beaded in crystal, which was made along the fashionable straight lines. The becoming Batteau neck line was banded in crystal embroidery. The long white satin train fastened on one shoulder extended to the waist line on the opposite side, and was also beaded in crystal design. Her veil of misty tulle extended the length of the train and was caught to the hair with a bandeau of silver ribbon, studded in rhinestones. Natural orange blossoms caugh at either side of the hair cascaded to the waist line. The bride's bouquet was of bride's roses and lilies of the valley in cascade effect.

The groom with his best man, Edward Eastman, joined the bride at the altar.

How to Have Beautiful Hair

To be charming and attractive you must have beautiful hair.

Beautiful hair is not a matter of luck, it is simply a matter of care.

You can have beautiful hair if you shampoo it properly. Proper shampooing is what brings out all the real life and lustre, the natural wave and color, and makes it soft, fresh and luxuriant.

Your hair simply needs frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, but it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soap. The free alkali, in ordinary soap, soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it. This is why millions of women, everywhere, use Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo.

This clear, pure, and entirely greaseless product cannot possibly injure, and does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in.

It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil.

The hair dries quickly and evenly, and has the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it really is. It leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive and a four ounce bottle lasts for months.

When Hearts Command

BY ELIZABETH YORK MILLER

Philip had lied to her—deliberately lied. Mrs. Egan didn't own such a thing as a son. Hadn't Lois Hemmersley said so? And Lois ought to know. Oh, how cruel and wicked of him! How much kinder it would have been, really, had he frankly owned up to the failure of their impossible marriage, instead of descending to the depths of such miserable deception. She felt she could have borne it better.

She walked slowly through the hall and out into the twilight of the garden. There was a strange feeling in her head and she put up her hands to her temples. Was this the way madness began? What did mad people do? Her gaze riveted upon the sluggishly flowing river. Sometimes they did that—drowned themselves.

Summer, shimmering with heat like the golden glow of a furnace, lay over Bordighera. The English villa colony, with few exceptions, had fled, and most of the Italians, including resident hotel and pension proprietors, had taken their families to the mountain or the cool, shady heights above La Mortala.

It had been a long time since Hector Gaunt had even thought of abandoning his farm for seasonal reasons. He was one of those rare people who are affected neither by heat nor cold, and to whom mountain, sea or plain are one as regards air and general climatic conditions. If anything, he preferred Bordighera in the summer time, for then he practically had it to himself, barring the natives, and, like all hermits, he was selfish.

But now he did think of making a move, and actually did so, as far as the Villa Tatina. It seemed necessary, on Jean's account, Hugo's childishness had progressed rapidly. Sometimes they thought it must have been the fall which developed his essentricities, for certainly they had become more marked since that event.

He was once more in prison, poor fellow, although, fortunately, he did not realize it. The big iron gates of the villa were always kept locked and he was never allowed to wander about the town unless Jean or Gaunt was with him. They told him that the gates must be locked, because of the danger of thieves, and, accepting this theory, he spent long hours patrolling the grounds with Tito and an old gun he had found in one of the attics. Needless to say, the gun was not loaded. Hugo was quite sensible enough to appreciate this, but he said anybody trying to get over the wall and having it leveled at him would think it was loaded.

He made a great game of guarding the premises. Jean was a beautiful lady whom neighboring robber barons were seeking to carry away; the Villa Tatina, a medieval castle filled with treasure. Gaunt was the captain of the citadel, and Hugo and Tito his army. For a long time while there had been no piping in the garden, just a steady, watchful patrol by the army of two, until they had worn quite a path around the walls. It was a difficult task to impress Tito with the seriousness of his duties. He would wander about, sniffing and snorting in his own peculiar fashion—seeking for eat in the shrubbery—and had frequently to be called sharply to attention. If anything, this game got on Jean's nerves worse than the eternal piping. If she took her book into the fernery—the only cool spot out of doors in the daytime—it was disconcerting to hear a terse cry of "Halt, or I fire," and find oneself looking into the barrel of an ancient musket, however one was assured that it was not loaded. Then Hugo, still serious, would demand to know if she were friend or enemy, and upon learning she was a friend, would repeat the "password," which was changed every day and served up with the breakfast trays. Sometimes she could remember and sometimes she couldn't, and if she failed Hugo would be angry and remind her that by her carelessness they might easily lose the citadel and she would be carried away by the Guelphs or Ghibellines and immersed forever more in a tower or dungeon.

The servants, fortunately, humored him, and so did Gaunt, but to Jean these symptoms were tragic and alarming. She could not play the game of defending the citadel with any heartiness. Over and over again Gaunt assured her that Hugo's childishness was as comfortable a form as his mania could take, both for herself and others, but perhaps she knew Hugo better than Gaunt did. Children may be mischievous and inventive, but Hugo, under it all, was a little malicious. He would point that gun of his and click it, although for punishment it had been taken away from him on several occasions. One could not forget that he had once shot and killed a man.

Jean would not admit, scarcely to herself, that she was beginning to be afraid of him. She locked her door at night, something she had never done before, and once—awaking suddenly—she sprang up with a convulsive start with the cold white moon staring full at her, convinced for a few seconds that the moon was Hugo's face. The horror of it was so unbearable that she closed and barred the heavy wooden shutters and swiched on the bedside light. In consequence, for the rest of the night, she stifled. Often Gaunt and she had debated about making some change, but the problem of Hugo was too great.

"We shall be here for the rest of our lives," she said, wearily.

Cooper-Inman Marriage Brilliant Social Event

on the stairs which was wreathed in smilax. She donned her traveling suit of caramel-colored Elizabeth crepe before leaving on the wedding journey which will include a trip to Europe. The lovely suit was made in three pieces and was tucked in parallel lines edged with narrow brown lace. Her hat was of brown straw and matched the gown.

The Handsome Gowns.

Among the many handsome gowned women who were present was Mrs. Joseph Cooper, the bride's mother, who wore an exquisite gown of orchid-colored chiffon. She wore with this a corsage bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Samuel Inman's gown was of black chiffon richly embroidered in steel. She wore a corsage bouquet of orchids.

Mrs. Edward Inman was gowned in white chiffon, crystal embroidered, and veiling white satin. Her flowers were orchids.

Mrs. Adele Fitzgerald, of Philadelphia, the bride's aunt, wore black tulle embroidered in black sequins and draped over black satin. A corsage bouquet of pink roses completed her costume.

Mrs. Emily MacDougald, the groom's grandmother, wore black lace trimmed in jet and veiling black satin Her flowers were pink roses.

Mrs. John Grant, the groom's aunt, was gowned in white faille silk, with a corsage bouquet of French roses.

Mrs. Hugh Richardson, another aunt of the groom, wore flame-colored chiffon.

Mrs. Frank Hardeman, of Athens, Ga., another aunt of the groom, wore orange colored chiffon with beading of crystals.

Mrs. Frank Inman, an aunt of the bride, was gowned in gold lace over cloth of gold. Her corsage bouquet was of pink roses.

Mrs. Richard Wilmer, of Washington, D. C., a cousin of the groom, wore a charming frock of rose colored taffetas with lace ruffles and a corsage bouquet of French roses.

No weddinz of many years has been of wider social interest in Atlanta. The families of both the bride and groom are identified with all the growth and life of Atlanta.

Distinguished Families.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cooper, of Philadelphia. Her mother was Miss Nellie Inman, of Atlanta, the only daughter of the late Samuel Martin Inman, prominent Atlantan. She attended school at the Erwin school in Philadelphia and was for one winter at the North Avenue Presbyterian school in this city. She graduated from the Emma Willard school in Troy, N. Y. She has been in Atlanta since December, the guest of Mrs. Samuel Martin Inman, at her lovely home on Peachtree street, and for whom she is named. By a singular and delightful coincidence in marrying Mr. Inman, she assumes entirely the name of her grandmother, Mildred McPheeters Inman.

Owing to the recent bereavement in the Cooper family her visit in Atlanta has been very quiet and she has not entered into the social life this year to any extent. She is a sister of Samuel Inman Cooper and Joseph Walter Cooper, Jr.

On her father's side, Miss Cooper is descended from the noted Quaker Cooper family of Cooper's Point, N. J.

Mr. Inman is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Inman and a grandson of the late Hugh T. Inman, for whom he is named. He is a nephew of Mrs. John W. Grant and Mrs. Hugh Richardson on his father's side. Of no less prominence and distinction is the maternal side of his house, for from his mother, who was the lovely Emily MacDougald, he has inherited many gifts of mind and manner. His grandmother, Mrs. Emily MacDougald, formerly from Columbus, Ga., has been one of the ardent leaders in behalf of suffrage in this state and was the first president of the Georgia Suffrage association. His grandfather, the late Col. William Alexander MacDougald, was one of the most prominent men in southern Georgia and was several times a member of the Georgia legislature.

Mr. Inman attended the University of Georgia and the Hill school in Pennsylvania. He is a brother of young Edward Inman, Jr.

They will go to Europe on their wedding journey. On their return they will make their home in Atlanta.

Floral Tribute Is Placed on Gordon Monument

A beautiful tribute paid by the Children of the Confederacy during the Stone mountain memorial dedication was the presentation to Governor Trinkle of a handsome floral design of their C. of C. shield as they welcomed him at Gordon's monument.

Wilson chapter; Caroline Hill Ridley and Henry B Earthman, of the Anna S. Fulton chapter, Decatur, Ga.; Conway Mizelle and Richard Aderhold, of the Bettie Chancellor chapter, College Park, Ga.; Walter Bedard and Fred Stewart, Jr..

THE HOUSEHOLD

Edited by Anne Rittenhouse.

OUTDOOR FURNITURE

Perhaps you have a prejudice against garden furniture, and if you have it is perhaps because your earliest associations with garden furniture was of some iron settee you knew in your childhood. It was painted an impossible green, a green that swore at the green grass and foliage about it, and it was planted in a front yard away from shade, fully exposed to the view of the street. No one ever sat in it, of course—it was about as useful as the little metal chairs that people used to put in cemetery lots by way of decoration.

The right sort of garden furniture properly placed is delightful, and the more we Americans get into the way of making use of garden seats and other furniture the more often we will descend from our verandas to spend hours of idleness in our gardens.

The garden furniture should be grouped, so as to make an outdoor room, and if possible it should be in a secluded place where you cannot be too much observed from the roadway. Moreover it should be placed where there is a reasonable amount of shade. It is rather desirable to have this outdoor room not too far from the house. If you place it far off then you will find yourself reluctant to spend much time there, and the task of drinking tea and partaking of other refreshments in your outdoor room will be more difficult.

Iron garden chairs even may be very attractive, and they are now to be had in reproduction of beautiful pieces placed in fine old French and Italian garden centuries ago. Of course these iron chairs do not have to be taken in, though they should be painted often enough to keep them from rusting. It is a good plan to have a group of cushions in attractive prints to carry to your garden, so that even the iron chairs may be made quite comfortable.

Wooden furniture for the garden is, of course, not so expensive as that of iron, and is quite durable to answer the purpose of most of us. It, too, should be painted to keep it from deteriorating unless it is of the rustic sort, when the bark suffices to protect it from the weather.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Will Make Them Last.

Hot water bottles will live longer if washed every two months with water to which a little ammonia or soda has been added.

Won't Take Long.

Even if you have not time to thoroughly wash and sterilize baby's bottles when he is finished with them, at least take time to rinse them out in cold water to prevent any milk from souring in the bottles.

For an Entree.

Prepare slices of bread as you would for French toast, place in a buttered pan. On each piece of bread put a slice of tomato and a liberal sprinkling of grated cheese. Add salt and pepper and place in oven to bake.

SUMMER FOOD FOR YOUNG CHILDREN.

Simple, clean, wholesome food of the right kinds fed to children in proper quantities and combinations will go farther than almost any single factor in assuring them normal health and sturdy development these hot sizzling days.

What Women Wear

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE.

There is Nothing Incongruous Now-a-days in Combining Organdie and Felt in the Same Hat.

It's a wise woman who can tell at first glance a summer hat from a winter hat—and it is sometimes quite a feat of discernment to tell whether the wearing of felt in warm weather is a matter of "yet" or "again."

The difficulty used to be that women and the milliners were wont to rush the seasons—hence straw in February and felt and velvet in August. Now the situation has become more complicated, because the old rules have given place to new. Felt and velvet and fur used to be appropriate only to autumn and winter hats—even when one rushed the season and wore them in midsummer. Straw and lace and artificial flowers were befitting spring and summer hats, and spring hats they were even though worn in February.

Now felt is taken over by hats that actually are spring and summer hats, and winter hats may be laden down with summer flowers, may make use of straw or raffia and be framed or trimmed with lace.

Milliners are the most progressive of all the makers of women's apparel—they are less bound by tradition, less constrained by precedence than dressmakers or shoe designers or hair dressers or the makers of the dozen and one varieties of accessories that women demand. They are forever blazing the trail for the others. The milliners start a new fashion in hats and haltingly the hairdressers fall in line by devising new hair arrangements to meet the demand of the new style of hat. The milliners make use of a new sort of trimming—a new fabric, a new color—and the dressmakers fall in line. To be sure dressmakers often blaze the trail for the milliners, too, but the milliners at least do their share of this pioneer work.

One of the rather daring combinations of fabric they have brought out this season is organdie and felt. Felt and straw combinations had seemed bizarre once, and so had felt hats embroidered with straw, but organdie and felt is almost as novel a combination of fabrics as silver lace and ornaments of black suede recently made use of.

Her Friend's Husband

BY INEZ KLUMPH

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED.

Gloria Chase comes home from boarding school for wedding of her cousin.

Virginia Schuyler, on the night of the ceremony. As she dresses she recalls the night a year before, when her own romance of a few hours began.

CHAPTER III.

A Shadow From the Past.

Gloria ran across one corner of the monlit lawn, a fleeting shadow on its whiteness. Her cape of gold cloth, with a great collar of white fur, was drawn close about her, but the rosy tulle of her gown strayed out beneath it and fluttered as she ran.

The night was very dark in the woods; when the moonlight filtered through the trees' branches, it threw strange shadows across the girls' path. Dwarf trees, curiously distorted, caught her gown on their gnarled branches; they were like queer little old men reaching out crooked arms to her. She began to run, her own imagination making her fear greater. There were legends of ghosts, of curious rites that the Indians had performed with living sacrifices, that she had heard thoughtlessly; now they came back to her with horrible distinctness.

But she would not let her fears get the best of her. Rage surged through her heart at the thought of the complacent guests up at the house, and of her ghost, who, for fear of contagion, had refused to let anyone help this old gardener bury his dead. Smallpox—what if she would catch it! She shuddered at the thought. And yet was it not much better to help old Cullen than to let him bury his beloved little grandchild, the light of his life, alone.

At last she came to the clearing where Cullen lived. There was a pathetic little garden, bright with marigolds and scraggy chrysanthemums, and in its midst stood a small red wagon, with a limp doll seated in it. Her throat choked with sobs, Gloria ran to the house and pounded on the door with her fists. It was only a matter of time until her absence would be discovered and someone would come for her, she felt. And she must help Cullen to bury the child.

The old man came to the door at last, the dead child's body in his arms. He seemed stupefied by grief. Gloria explained tenderly why she was there, and he seemed to understand. She picked up a spade that stood near the house, and he walked slowly over to the spot where the little wagon stood, and said, "Here," then he stepped aside, and Gloria began to dig.

But the earth was very hard, and the spade was too heavy for her slender arms. She thought that she heard someone coming. Throwing down the spade, she dropped to her knees and began to dig wildly with her hands. Her gown was tattered and disheveled, where its draperies had caught on the bushes as she ran through the woods, and her hair tumbled about her pale, set face. But she dug frantically, not daring to look up, as she heard footsteps on the hard earth of the clearing.

"Will you not help?"

The voice was very kind, but Gloria did not dare to stop. She did not recognize it, but she had no donbt that this was someone who had come from the house, who would insist on taking her home. She bent lower over her task, fearing that he would force her to stop. But when he spoke again, saying, "Please let me help!" she looked up at him.

He was very tall, and very dark, and the eyes that met hers were so kind that she could not be frightened any longer. She had not seen him before, but she did not pause to wonder how he had reached the house. She stared at him in bewilderment, and he in turn looked down at the slender girl kneeling there, with her wrap of cloth of gold tossed on the bare, brown earth behind her, and her rose-colorel gown clinging to her and fluttering in the wind.

Her curly hair had tumbled down over her bare shoulders; she looked nearer ten years of age than seventeen, as she knelt there, gazing up at him.

"Yes, you may help," she said, at last. He caught up the spade and went vigorously to work; realizing that she had been making but little headway, and that he would soon finish the task, she turned to the flower bed beside her, and picked a bunch of the orange and yellow marigolds that nodded in the wind.

As she waited for him to finish his task she watched him quietly; tall and dark, he gave an impression of strength and power which somehow took away her fear. She began to wonder about him—who he was, and how had he come to the island? Guests were expected the next day, she knew, but she had not heard that anyone was coming that night.

Of her own beauty she was unconscious; she could not know that to this strange man she seemed the loveliest thing he had ever seen. She thought that he was intent only on his task, and did not know how often he glanced up at her as he worked.

When the short, shallow grave was ready at last, she caught up her glittering cloak and spread it on the earth at the bottom. Old Cullen looked at her in bewilderment for a moment, then knelt and laid the child in the golden folds, and Gloria, with trembling fingers, her eyes blinded by hot tears, wrapped it close about the small, still body.

It would have been a heartbreaking task for the girl if she had not had the comfort of the man's presence; unconsciously she was helped by it, and felt that somehow he stood between her and the dread presence of death.

THE MANICURE.

Begin your manicure by assembling all your tools on a convenient low table. You'll want a towel, a bowl of very warm soapy water, with a little perfume or lemon juice in it if you want the manicure to be specially refreshing, a long flexible nail file, a file with an end for cleaning under the nails, an orange wood stick, one end wrapped in a little cotton, manicure scissors, emery paper, buffer, polishing paste or powder, and a small jar of any sort of cream. You can include a little pumice powder, or cuticle solvent, if you use anything extra for removing the dead skin. But these last aren't really necessary.

File your nails to whichever shape best suits your hand—a moderately pointed oval is safest. Soak the finger tips a few minutes in the warm water, clean under the nails, smooth them off with the emery board, slip the blades of the scissors under each corner of the nail, and clip off the rough bits which collect.

Ordinarily, pushing back the surrounding skin will be enough. But in some cases, powdered pumice must be rubbed around the nail, soaked off and the skin cut smooth—or any one of the patented solvents may be used. As these methods are drying, a special amount of cream is necessary afterwards or the nails will become dry and brittle. In most cases, however, pushing back the skin, then using the powder and clipping off the rough bits of skin which the powder shows up, is quite enough. Wash off the powder and rub in cream. Let the cream stay on as long as possible, wipe around each nail with the cotton wrapped end of the orange stick, and polish once more with a clean buffer, or the same one wiped free of powder.

Veda—Barney G.—You cannot prevent yourself growing taller, but if you keep up your general health it will only be a few years until you begin to fill out and all your proportions will be perfect.

For the split hair ends trim off all the broken ones every few weeks. To do this easily, make a number of very loose braids, shake out all the lose ends so they may be reached along the line of the braids and trim.

The Vanishing Men

BY RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

Next Week, "Lou-Lou"
By H. Bedford-Jones.

In March Parmalee conceived the idea that he was being followed. He spoke of it several times and Brena laughed. He was not amused.

"Then report it to the police," she said.

"The police? What a suggestion!"

She heard no more, however, of his morbid suspicion. And yet the unknown terror, of which he would now say nothing, infected her so that the cloth of each day had woven into it some threads of fear, in a crazy, senseless, indistinct pattern.

A crisis came one evening.

A musical performance kept the pair out until nearly eleven.

"Goodnight," said Brena, as they parted. "You seemed tonight more like yourself."

He laughed and waved to her as she went down the corridor to her chambers. She was undressing slowly when there sounded three quick successive pistol shots.

Her first thought was that Parmalee had killed himself. Perhaps if her mind had been less active she would have screamed, but she remembered that three shots were more than the number usually fired by one who who seeks self destruction. So she concluded that whatever the menace her husband had feared, it now had proved its reality.

For the moment, she at least believed, and even in her startled breathing she formed the words, "It is some fault of mine."

She opened the door cautiously and the moon's rays on the carpet beneath her feet went forward across the carpet in the corridor like sliding fingers.

"Stand back, Brena!" Compton called in the darkness. "Don't get between me and him. He's at the end of the hall. Look out. Im going to turn on the lights!"

A sudden flood of light filled the room.

"You fool!" cried Brena.

"You have shot the glass out of this picture." She pointed to the large photographic print.

"I thought it was him," said Parmalee.

"Him?" asked Brena. "Who?"

"Why—a burglar," he said quivering.

She came close and put her hands upon his shoulders.

"The city is bad for you, Compton," she said. You are quivering yourself to pieces over some absurd apprehension. We must go outside somewhere—a house, a garden—quiet."

He almost blubbered. "We must go where I can escape, if there is a chance to escape," he said. "And Brena—" "If anything does happen to me—"

"Yes."

"—you're not to blame—not in the sense that it's your own will. Do you understand?"

She looked at him in disgust; for the first time she felt a pang of hate.

Within 30 days he had purchased a great gloomy house up the Hudson.

He had a coping of concrete, filled with broken glass, built all around the top of the wall. He had ordered iron bars for the lower windows, and an elaborate electric burglar-alarm system.

But the retreat into the walled estate gave little relief to the secret fears of Compton Parmalee.

For a few months, to be sure, he showed lively interest in the rehabilitation of the place, and Brena, who had made up her mind to stand by her extraordinary husband, formulated a policy with full knowledge that it would be hard to follow.

Her own nature revolted against mysteries and superstitions and fears of unrealities.

Her husband had not ever given her grounds to assert that these were the basis for his morbid panics, but he had, by malice or inadvertence, created a dim picture of some menace, some strange force, which pursued to the death any man unlucky enough to have meddled with her destiny.

At times it was difficult for her to escape, by the exercise of common sense, a haunting idea that there was some foundation for this apparent absurdity.

A choice was open to her between turning her back upon Parmalee's fears and setting out to uncover them.

It was not because the latter course was difficult that she rejected it; it was not because of his increasing irritability when questioned, nor was it because he always, in the end, made her feel that he was trying to spare her from some dreadful knowledge, and some overhanging curse that was upon her.

She chose to neglect the terror that had seized him because she felt that if sufficient neglect were heaped upon it, it would gradually die. Often enough in years that were to follow she wished with all her being that she had not allowed herself to remain in the dark.

She wished often enough after the end came that she had at least kept her eyes open, but there were incidents which drew her attention by the very force of their being extraordinary or bizarre.

Within a year Parmalee had developed an insatiable appetite for his studies of the history of the southwest, his collecting of books and manuscripts upon the ancient civilization and tribes of Central America, Mexico and the tangent region of the United States, where the painted deserts are, and his compilation of data that bore in any way upon the comparison of the Inca, the Aztec and the Yucatan civilization with those of Egypt, Greece and Persia.

The third winter of their marriage her husband began a practice of finding relief from that terror which had crept in upon him at first but now had begun to drive his nerves into a gallop. He who had conserved so carefully his precious health, now undertook a new burden.

One morning Parmalee did not answer Brena's call. He was not at the breakfast table. The servants could not find him in his rooms.

He was discovered finally by his voice which came in faintly with the sound of the wind. Brena without protection from the driving rain ran out the great front door, down the path to the massive iron gate.

Parmalee was there with his little white hands grasping the upright bars—swaying backward and forward like a caged animal, staring out with wild red eyes at the high shores of the distant river bank seen through the haze, his bare head wet and disheveled.

"Come on and get me—damn your eyes! he screamed. "You've been waiting long enough. Come on and get me. I'm not afraid of you all!"

Brena looked up and down the road beyond the gate. No living creature was in sight.

"You better come into the house, Compton," she said with a tone of authority.

She believed he had lost his mind.

He looked at her stupidly, his lower jaw limp and hanging, but he followed her meekly to the house.

He stopped with his hands on the black walnut newel post of the stairs and leaned toward her.

"Footprints," he said grinning like a fiend, "Footprints!"

Brena, in his library, walked rapidly toward the telephone on his desk. At last she had been driven to summon the aid, counsel and authority of the world beyond the doors of this damned home. Parmalee was mad!

But as she put out her hand toward the telephone instrument it knocked over an empty glass. She raised this glass to her nose.

The supports of her heart suddenly crumbled, for then she knew that her husband was not mad, but was only at the end of a long night of trying to drink himself into the freedom of insensibility.

To Brena the cause of his terror, his suspicions, his isolation, the horrid exiled days he led, the sleepless nights he spent, now appeared of less importance than the fact that no man was suffering more than he.

But she was unable to help him; his defenses were now impregnable.

"I do not know what you mean," he said. "We live a clean, wholesome kind of existence, don't we? You never hear complaints from me. I do not go out much, it is true. But I am working. I do not sleep well. Neither do many men. I drank too much once, that is true. But that was thirty or forty days ago. You have not seen me make the mistake again."

"It calms me. My nerves are not good—there's no denying. But why should you complain, Brena? You can have anything you want for the asking. Why complain?"

"I'm not complaining," she said. "I am inquiring."

"Inquiring?" he said with sudden heat. "Well, by heaven, if you ask once too often—you shall know! I'll tell you something about yourself you'll not want to hear."

"You cannot," she answered quietly.

"Are you laughing at me?" he exclaimed angrily.

"I was smiling."

"Smile on!" he snapped. "Maybe you can tell where Jim Hennepin is. Maybe in the end you won't smile. Maybe you will learn what it is that has clung to you—unseen and unknown!"

"I demand to know!"

"No—by heaven—you sha'n't. Not until I know all—myself. Not until I know how I shall pay!"

He paused.

"And let that come quickly," he added, throwing his open hands toward the ceiling as if beseeching heathen gods. "Sudden, swift and sure!"

He rushed out of the room.

Night after night she heard him pacing his study floor beneath her room.

Once she awakened and heard no sound. She crept down the stairs and peered into his study. He was crouching down below the window sill, only his eyes above, watching the running shadows made by trees, shrubs, wind and moon upon the lawn.

"What are you doing, Compton?" she asked.

He jumped around and the laughed.

"I was thinking," he replied.

"Thinking? Thinking of what?"

"Of life."

"And what about it?"

"How I love it!" he had exclaimed.

A few days later he rode in with Brena to New York. A new spirit had come into him. His eyes were filled with a new light; his voice had grown more firm. On his countenance was a new expression, in his motions something of the former dynamic activity and decisiveness.

When Brena came h me that evening he had not returned.

At half-past eight the telephone rang again.

It was Mr. Lanfrew, Compton's lawyer. He wanted to speak to Mr. Parmalee. It was about some legal document that had been drawn that morning.

"But Mr. Parmalee is not here yet," said Brena.

"That's strange," said the telephone instrument. "I understood you were going on a long journey, Mrs. Parmalee. He had drawn the money to buy tickets. He wanted to hurry home this afternoon."

She shuddered. She wondered if by any chance it could be that the blow had fallen at last—the final dread conviction; she felt that it had.

Brena was right. Compton Parmalee, in spite of the secret efforts of the police, in spite of all that money could do to conduct a search without publicity, had dissolved as completely as a wisp of smoke in the blast of some great wind of heaven.

"Well," said Peter DeWolfe as Brena finished her story. "That is not a very pretty story."

The gray light of early summer dawn filtered through the chintz curtains of Brena's apartment.

"No, Peter," she replied. "It is not a pretty story."

She shivered as one who, having no sleep, feels the dawn as a wet shroud.

"You can see now, Peter, why the time when your arms were about me and your lips were on mine is the end," she said. "If I knew I was free, Peter, I could not see more of you. I could not bear the thought that you too—"

"Would vanish?" he finished and laughed.

She did not answer.

"But you can't believe—" he began. "Damn it—the thing is absurd!"

"You forget that I have lived close to this thing! You might believe too, if you had heard not my words but the words of life itself!"

"You've told me all?"

Brena, sensing the presence of a doubt, said, wearily, "Yes, Peter—all."

He walked up and down the rug, touching the repetitions of the pattern with the toes of his shoes.

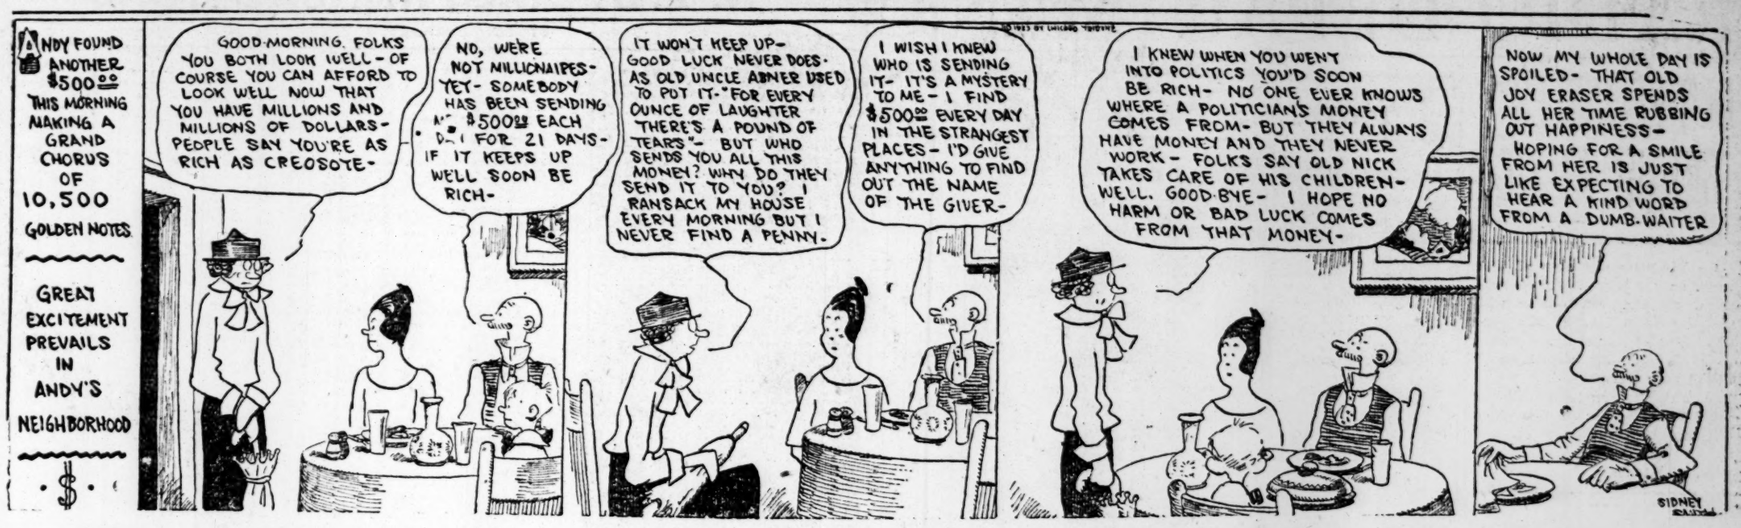

"What about this Kuk-ul-can? You never found that scrap of paper again?"

"Yes," she said. "I had kept the purse. It belonged to my mother. I kept it. In the lining—last year—I found the scrap of paper."

"It's here?" asked Peter eagerly.

"OLD RELIABLES" BIG HIT AT WGM

On Thursday afternoon of this week, on the 6 to 7 o'clock program, Warner's Seven Aces will play for radio fans of this station eight of the numbers which were recorded by the General Phonograph company last week. The Thursday program will no doubt be one of the greatest radio offerings in the history of this station and listeners, far and wide, will tune in.

Warner's Seven Aces, famous Constitution orchestra, south's premier dance organization, added a new and brighter star to their diadem of success at Station WGM last night when they made their regular semi-weekly appearance on a radio program at this station.

After an absence of more than a week, during which time they made a number of records for the General Phonograph company, the southland's best known musical organization returned to the south's "Old Reliable" station in a radio offering which will live in the hearts of music lovers as long as the melody of their orchestrations remain engraved on General Phonograph discs.

"Apple Sauce."
"A Perfect Kiss."
"Broken Hearted Melody."
"Chansonette."
"That Red-Headed Gal."

—were among the popular orchestrations which the Aces played for WGM fans. "Snapping into" their usual inimitable style—that "truly Warner style" which music lovers know only as an accomplishment of the Aces, these famous southerners played as no orchestra ever played at this station before.

Great care must be used in introducing anything new into Cuba because its reputation will be permanently injured if the first few users are dissatisfied in any way.

Popular WGM Artists

Photographs by Walton Reeves.

Miss Helen Zaban, pianist, and Miss Martha Anderson, mezzo-soprano, two brilliant WGM stars. Miss Zaban is a pupil of I. M. Mayer, of Atlanta, and Miss Anderson is a voice pupil of Signor Emilio Volpi, noted Atlanta teacher. Miss Zaban featured WGM's 9:30 to 10:45 broadcast last night, and Miss Anderson was the shining light of last Sunday night's late offering.

Midnight Program at WGM

Station WGM, The Atlanta Constitution, will have only three programs today. The usual 6 to 7 o'clock and the 9:30 to 10:30 periods will be silent, in accordance with the policy inaugurated by WGM many months ago and followed later by other local stations.

The midnight program, regularly Wednesday midnight features, will be the principal musical broadcast. The usual 1 to 2:30 o'clock broadcast, featuring Buel B. Risinger's 42-piece orchestra, and Mrs. Maybelle Norton, organist of the theater, will be heard, supplemented by WGM's "business" program.

The third game of the baseball series between Chattanooga and Atlanta will occupy the 3 to 4 o'clock period. WGM broadcasts each of the "home" games on Ponce de Leon this summer, being the first southern station to successfully broadcast a Southern league game.

Mrs. Rose L. Matthews, dramatic soprano; Miss Olive Walker, dramatic soprano; Miss Elizabeth Boswell, pianist; A. F. Macoun, tenor and pianist, and Ernest Durrett are listed among WGM stars who will feature the midnight offering tonight.

These artists are well known to radio fans and will be given an ovation on their appearance at the late hour at WGM.

Sextet of Stars Heard On WGM's Late Program

Signor Emilio Volpi, noted Atlanta teacher of voice and opera coach, again appeared at WGM in the role of sponsor of a radio program last night. Assisting the widely known voice teacher were Miss Emily G. Watts, mezzo-soprano; Miss Helen Zaban, pianist; Dave Frank, tenor; Donald H. King, robust tenor, and Jimmy Findley, pianist and baritone. Miss Watts, Mr. King and Mr. Finley are voice pupils of Signor Volpi; Miss Zaban is a brilliant young pupil of I. M. Mayer, of Mayer Piano school, and Mr. Frank is a tenor of nation-wide reputation, who was passing through Atlanta and stopped off for a visit with his friend, Signor Volpi.

Miss Watts, talented and attractive young vocalist, is quite well known to WGM's circle of listeners. The wonderful richness of her mezzo-soprano voice, its mellowness and quality, have endeared her to thousands of song lovers. Miss Watts has been visiting friends and relatives in Ohio and Kentucky for three weeks and following the announcement of her return to Atlanta and appearance on WGM's Tuesday night program, the telephone was a-jingle constantly bringing a barrage of "hearty welcomes" to the pretty young artist.

Miss Zaban made her debut to WGM's audience last night in a radio program which will go down in the history of this station as an outstanding success. This winsome and attractive young "radio debutante" is a brilliant exponent of the Mayer system and an artist whose playing suggests a successful musical career.

Mr. Frank's numbers included "My Pal," "Wonderful One," "Runnin' Wild," "In a Corner of the World," "When the Leaves Come Tumbling Down," and many other late song hits. His wonderful voice was unusually well displayed in these numbers and listeners who heard his contributions last night can easily understand his wide popularity. Mr. Frank's voice is a tenor of rare beauty, exceptional richness and a purity of tone which makes it most pleasing. His splendid talents, combined with the ease and simplicity of his singing, suggests many years of continued popularity and success for the dazzling young New Yorker.

Donald King, a robust tenor whose popularity is a thing so well known to WGM officials and radio fans of the nation that comment is unnecessary. It is only necessary to say that Donald was at his best last night and his voice gave every evidence of long and careful training under Signor Volpi.

Jimmy Finley, popular and well-known Atlanta pianist, played the accompaniments for Mr. Frank's numbers in his usual acceptable manner. Jimmy is extremely popular with song lovers and his frequent appearances on WGM programs is a thing looked forward to with eagerness by thousands. His inimitable style of playing and his "jazz" and "talking" songs have made his name a by-word among radio fans of the nation.

Signor Volpi, following his usual custom, appeared as accompanist for his voice pupils.

Mrs. Anderson Talks to Fans About Fashions

Mrs. Martha Goode Anderson, originator of WGM's woman's department—the first of its kind in America—one of the south's most brilliant newspaper women and an authority on fashions, made her weekly appearance on WGM's 6 to 7 o'clock program Tuesday night in a message of more than usual interest to women listeners.

WGM's woman's department is attracting nation-wide interest and is a feature of Tuesday night's 6 to 7 o'clock broadcast which hundreds of listeners eagerly look forward to. Scores of letters from interested listeners reach Mrs. Anderson regularly seeking information on styles, fashions, beauty and other subjects of particular interest to women fans. Each letter is answered promptly by Mrs. Anderson provided, of course, a self-addressed stamped envelope is forwarded with request.

Mrs. Anderson's message last night was devoted to a new vogue of straw shoes and stockingless feet, so fashionable at present in Paris. "Frost hats," made of tinsel and felt, came in for mention along with other kindred subjects. The ten-minute period was unusually interesting.

Mrs. Anderson is a member of the woman's department of The Constitution and inquiries should be directed to that address.

LEW SILVER KNOCKS OUT KID PECK

The fourth was even, but Bailey put the fight back on even keel in the fifth when he fought Suby all around the ring.

Bailey took the sixth and went ahead on points, but Suby took the seventh and eighth, for the first time looking like the winner. It was suspected that Bailey's great fight in the sixth, when he had Suby all but knocked out, had sapped away the last ounce of reserve power possessed by the Atlantan, but Bill surprised the customers by taking the ninth and the tenth was a draw.

Harry Allen, a youngster who swings from Port Arthur, proved a tartar for Hollis Sullivan through ten rounds. The first was even, but Allen took the second and the third was even. Sullivan then took two rounds in a row and enjoyed a slight lead, but Allen copped the sixth. From this point on Allen took one round, as did Sullivan, and two were even. The decision was booed, the crowd feeling that Allen should have been entitled to the decision. However the Macon lad walked into many straight punches that were overlooked by the fans and his wild swings resulted in much missing.

Young Collins and Baby Stribling put on a slashing exhibition that was very even until the fourth when Collins launched a savage attack that brought him the judges' verdict.

LONGEST EXTRADITION FIGHT RECORDED ENDS

New York, June 19.—Charles Glen Collins, former lieutenant colonel in the British army, who is charged with swindling a firm of $18,000 today began the second leg of his trip back to Bombay from New Orleans, after the longest extradition fight on record. Collins, whose case has been in the courts for five years, sailed for England on the steamship Pittsburg with a Scotland Yard detective. He arrived here yesterday from Louisiana.

Nuts strung, then dipped in a mixture of vegetable gelatine and a syrup made from dates, raisins or pomegranates, to which has been added a few drops of attar of rose, is a favorite confection of the Turkish harem.

Tributes Paid To Dr. Felton On His Birthday

Hundredth Birthday of Late William H. Felton Celebrated in Cartersville.

Cartersville, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—Celebrating the 100th birthday of the late Dr. William H. Felton, a goodly number of friends gathered at the Methodist church here Tuesday afternoon when a very interesting program was carried out. Dr. L. Elmer Dutton was master of ceremonies, the opening prayer being said by Rev. Mr. Talley, of White.

This was followed by a song, after which ex-Senator Rebecca Latimer Felton read a number of letters received by her, including tributes paid the memory of her distinguished husband by Clark Howell, editor of The Constitution; John T. Boifeuillet, of Georgia public service commission; ex-Governor Nat E. Harris, Charles Murphey Candler and others who had served with Dr Felton in Georgia campaigns and political battles.

Governor Harris said, "My congratulations that you should have lived to this day and achieved for American womanhood the honor that belongs to you. Your husband was my teacher in preparing for college and for the field of hope and ambition that followed."

Mr. Howell paid a special tribute to Dr. Felton's part in saving the Western & Atlantic railroad to the state of Georgia, adding that, "your husband put his whole soul and all the fire of his marvelous eloquence behind the movement to defeat the sale of the property or to lease it at what he thought to be less than its true value."

Mrs. Annie Laurie Cunyus sang "Nearer My God to Thee," and this was followed with short impromptu tributes to the memory of the distinguished Georgian by Rev. Mr. Crow, William C. Walton, Charlie T. Jones, a brother of the late Sam P. Jones and by Mrs. Sam P. Jones, widow of the famous evangelist.

She said Mr. Jones had often given to Dr. Felton credit for inspiring him to lead the Christian life and an inspiration to him in his climb to a place as one of the world's greatest leaders of men.

The entire program was very interesting and at its close those present marched to the monument standing in the court house yard nearby, erected to Dr. Felton's memory by his wife, and there placed a wreath of lovely flowers. This was in testimony of their love and esteem for Dr. Felton. He has been dead fourteen years, passing away September 27, 1909, at the age of 86.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE LICENSES STUDENTS

Fayetteville, Ga., June 19.—Four students were licensed to preach at the conference of the south Atlanta district of the Methodist church held here Tuesday. They were Floyd Ellsworth Hartsfield, of West Palm Beach, Fla.; Henry Harold Dillard, of Atlanta; Gilbert Guernsey Ramsey, Atlanta, and Samuel A. Wells, of Hapeville, Ga. Rev. J. M. Thrillkill was recommended for admission on trial into the north Georgia district.

Reports of educational institutions under the jurisdiction of the district were given in the form of addresses by Rev. A. W. Price, of Emory university, Atlanta; Dr. Ramsey C. Sharp, of Rhinehart college, Waleska, Ga.; Dr. Elam Dempsey, of Atlanta; Professor W. E. Thompson, of LaGrange college, and the chairman of the educational committee, Rev. C. M. Meeks. The latter made a strong plea for students to enroll in the colleges of the district.

As the presiding elder, Rev. Dr. Eakes, of Atlanta, was absent through illness, Bishop J. E. Dickey, whose area is in Texas, took charge of the conference and in his address stressed strongly the need of sound doctrines and the danger of cults.

President H. W. Cox, of Emory university, replied to critics of his action recently in expelling several students for hazing in no uncertain terms. He stated that he "would discipline and dismiss any student found guilty of immorality, hazing or drinking in the future."

FORMER AUGUSTAN PERHAPS FATALLY HURT IN ACCIDENT

Americus, Ga., June 19.—(Special.) Marion C. Cook was perhaps fatally hurt in an automobile accident at Smithville, near here this afternoon, and Jesse Faust badly injured. Lawrence Physioc, an Americus lad riding with Cook and Faust, escaped serious injury.

The party was going south on the Dixie highway. when at a point just south of Smithville the car ran into a ditch. The accident, it is believed, was due to Faust, an inexperienced driver, putting his foot upon the gas lever in mistake for the brake.

Cook, who was brought here for surgical attention, formerly lived in Augusta, but moved here from that city several months ago, and has since been employed as an automobile salesman here. He probably will die. Faust is a prosperous farmer, and Physioc is an Americus school boy.

Sugar.

New York, June 19.—The raw sugar market was steadier today and prices were established on the basis of 5 1-4 cents for Cubas cost and freight, equal to 703 for centrifugal. There were sales reported of 12,600 bags of Cubas at that level, and it was generally believed that more business was put through. At the close a limited quantity was still on offer wheat being taking.

Expectations of an increased consuming demand and a steadier tone to the spot market, as well as more favorable advices from abroad, led to increased covering and renewed buying for outside account in the raw sugar futures market with prices at one time showing advances of 22 to 30 points. The advance was checked by realizing in the last hour and prices were 7 to 12 points net higher. Closing: July 5.13; September 5.19; December 4.80; March 3.80.

There were no changes in the list price of refined sugar which ranged from 9.25 to 9.90 for fine granulated, but it is generally believed that nearly all refiners are accepting business at the inside price, while early in the day it was reported that some were even taking orders at 9 cents. There was a little better industry reported and withdrawals on old contracts were again of fair proportions.

Refined futures nominals.

In times when mummies were thought less of than today, many were exported and purchased by color manufacturers, who ground them down by machinery and turned them into a delicate brown liquid paint which was the delight of all artists.

REACTIONARY TONE ON CURB MARKET

New York, June 19.—Prices displayed a reactionary trend during the greater part of today's curb market. Quoted values were shaded at the start by the large volume of overnight selling orders and when these had been disposed of, selling pressure was applied by speculators for the decline.

Oil shares were again the hardest hit because of uncertain price conditions and the heavy overproduction in the southern California fields. New low records were established by a number of the active issues including Cities Service, Gulf Humble, Prairie Oil and Gas, Salt Creek and Mountain Producers, Mutual Oil, Imperial of Canada. and Phillips Petroleum, when issued, the net losses ranging from fractions to 4 points.

Durant closed 2 points below its previous sale and American Stores, when issued, dropped from 23 to 20 7-8. Other active industrials showed fractional recessions.

Narrow and irregular fluctuations characterized the trading in mining shares.

New York, June 19.—An opening decline in the cotton market was followed by rallies, but prices weakened again, under a renewal of July liquidation with that delivery selling down to 26.30c during the afternoon or 37 points net lower and into new low ground for the movement. The near month weakness combined with better weather reports led to considerable selling of new crop months, but after the early decline to 23.82c, October rallied to 24.25c and closed at 24.13c. The general market closed irregular, net 17 points lower to 13 points higher.

The market opened steady at an advance of one point on July but generally 5 to 7 points lower and soon showed net losses of 10 to 18 points under continued liquidation which was inspired by the poor showing of Liverpool, the better weather map and reports that yesterday's break in raw cotton had checked business in goods. Private crop advices were more favorable as a rule and the trade seemed to be expecting a bearish weekly report from the weather bureau tomorrow, but liquidation was considerably less active, after the heavy selling of the previous day, and the market firmed up around midday on covering. There were reports of a better tone in the stock market, which probably helped the rally, and there may have been some buying on southern advices claiming that there was an improved demand for new crop shipment. There was also some buying of new crop months here believed to be for trade account, and more numerous complaints of boll weevil helped to offset the better weather news. July sold up to 27.09c or 42 points net higher, and October advanced to 24.25c, making net advances of 14 to 25 points on the new crop position, but the market then weakened under a renewal of July liquidation. Rumors that co-operative marketing associations in the south were offering spots on an easier basis in order to clean up their holdings before the end of the season were not confirmed but may possibly have had some influence, and the afternoon break was accompanied by talk of renewed nervousness in the New York stock market. Last prices were several points up from the lowest on covering. Exports today 8,517, making 4,544,826 so far this season. Port receipts 5,510. U. S. port stocks 334,846.

LIQUIDATION OF JULY FEATURE AT N. O.

New Orleans, La., June 19.—Liquidation of the July position was the outstanding feature of the trading in cotton today. The market was unable to absorb the offerings that came from the long side, after the early trading. This weakness had all the more effect on the later positions because of the early strength of July, that month bulging 43 points over yesterday's close at one stage. Late in the day July was 35 points under the close of yesterday, standing at 26.37 as compared with 27.15 at the highest of the day. The close was 20 points down to 6 points up, net on the day, July closing at a net loss while the new crops closed at small advances. On the close July stood at a range of 26.52 to 26.53 while October stood at 23.50 to 23.51.

The opening was lower, under poor cables and a continuation of the selling movement of yesterday. Early declines amounted to 19 to 22 points but claims of serious insect damage in Texas soon caused a rally on which the highest levels of the day were reached. October traded up to 23.68 and the most active new crop positions at this time were 10 to 16 points higher than yesterday's final prices.

Warm and dry weather nearly everywhere in the belt caused selling to be renewed and, once the decline got under way, the market was dominated by the weakness of July, although the down swings on the new crops were not as pronounced as they were in the early session.

Cotton Seed Oil.

News, Views And Reviews

STOCK LETTER.

New York, June 18.—The stock market opened lower today and prices continued irregular throughout the day. Rails acted better than most other groups while the oils appeared to be still under pressure. MD was heavily sold, breaking the subscription price of the new stock to be issued which is $40 per share. There was no apparent reason for the heavy selling. The shorts in Studebaker became somewhat nervous causing a two point rally toward the close and the general list firmed up in the last hour. The market has declined steadily for more than a week now and sharp rallies should be expected within the next few days. Sentiment is still so bearish that cheap stocks now to be had are likely to be overlooked during the present wave of pessimism.—Fenner and Beane.

New York, June 18.—The feature in cotton today was further liquidation in July, the selling being credited to the same interest that sold yesterday. The demand for July was not so good resulting in a considerable loss in its premium. New crop months were comparatively steady due to buying on the theory that an upturn was in order after the cent break and that October was too far under spot even if it is a new crop month. The weather and forecast was good aside from which there was no news. The talk around the floor this afternoon was that today's selling of July practically cleans up the concentrated Wall street long interest in that month, altho this is, of course, only a guess. Impression seems to be gaining that a considerable proportion of any notices that may be issued June 26, will be stopped and the cotton exported.—Fenner and Beane.

GRAIN LETTER.

Chicago, June 19.—Liquidation ran its course about midday and a turn for the better took place as a little profit taking by shorts uncovered the absence of important offers. Strength in corn inspired some new commission house and local buying and market responded readily making a good advance from the low point of the day.

First Oklahoma wheat received in Kansas City shows disappointing quality. Some complaints of damage to wheat in Missouri by excessive rains followed by high temperature.

Corn—Scattered commission house buying and tightness in July made strong market although volume of business was not large. Weather conditions more favorable.

Oats—There was persistent buying of July in small lots by a leading cash interest, while late firmness in wheat inspired sources and were not pressing.

Provisions—Influenced by the grain rather than by the advance in hogs. Market early, firm late with a small trade. Hogs 10 to 15 up. Top 7.60c.—Fenner and Beane.

COTTON LETTER.

New Orleans, June 19.—Weevil reports are undoubtedly making sellers cautious but continued hot dry weather for a few days longer is almost certain to stimulate selling. Buying appears to be decreasing in volume and it won't take much pressure to bring about a decline.—Fenner and Beane.

STOCK LETTER.

New York, June 19.—The buying that came into the market was not of such a character to make it go very far. It was shorts taking profits. There is a noticeable absence of any public interest. Fundamentally the position security market appears sound. Banking and trade conditions almost without exception, portray healthy activity, and such recession as has occurred in some lines is to a large extent seasonal.—Doremus, Daniel and Company.

COTTON LETTER.

New Orleans, La., June 19.—More was heard of insect damage today but it did not appear to make a deep impression, most people apparently figuring that it is too early for weevil damage to be serious and that, moreover, the dry and hot weather is against weevil activity. Houston claimed that points in the Rio Grande valley were telephoning for poison with which to fight worms, said to be a menace to the crop in some sections.

The outlook is for scattered showers over a good part of the western belt and for fair weather over the eastern belt. A good part of the western belt, especially Texas, can stand scattered showers while the eastern belt needs continued dry and hot weather. Some of the late selling appeared to be based on expectations of favorable weekly crop and weather reports from the government tomorrow. These reports are likely to dominate the early session tomorrow.—Loremus, Daniel and Company.

COTTON LETTER.

New York, June 19.—Further weakness in July served to unsettle the market again especially as there were at the same time reports of better weather leading to improvement in the crop all of which served to promote selling. Those who are more prominent in the trading in cotton at the moment however are thought to be also active in the stock market while the actual trade is not as yet taking much interest further than to pick up a little in the new crop months on a scale down when opportunity offers to do that. Stock market logic is therefore being at present applied to cotton on the ground that the stock market is barometer of conditions generally. While such a theory may have had some foundation in the more distant past its authority is open to serious doubt with the wide changes which have taken place in conditions. There has been nothing in the news to imply impending pressure from the actual and many in the trade feel that the increasing reports of weevil present in large numbers in practically every section of the belt largely offsets the better weather advices. The fact that the weevil is doing no harm as yet is without meaning as that insect never becomes active until about August. The important fact is that they came through the winter successfully and stand ready to do damage when the right time comes. Prices may work lower for a time but advantage should be taken of such opportunities to make conservative purchases of later months. Exports 8,517—Post & Flagg.

COTTON LETTER.

New Orleans, June 19.—More favorable weather with continued long liquidation of July have increased bearish sentiment but while fluctuations were erratic the market showed more resistance to pressure. The weakness yesterday in security markets encouraged aggressive selling and there no doubt now exists quite an extensive short interest particularly in the eastern market. Reports from nearly all sections of presence of weevil in greater numbers than last year with a late crop is not an encouraging promise for this year's production. June, always a dull month with narrow markets as a consequence traders will likely await governments July report and in the interim weather conditions will probably govern fluctuations.—J. D. Hayward & Sons.

COTTON LETTER.

New Orleans, June 19.—Weather of course remains the all important thing and from the appearance of the map with two low pressure areas in the west a change for the worse is not out of question and should it materialize a sharp upturn could be the only logical consequence.—E. B. Norman & Company.

COTTON LETTER.

New York, June 19.—Heavy liquidation in July checked the recovery from the decline. New crops were in better demand though few orders from mills. Trade thinking better weather this week will bring better conditions report June 25. Large retail consumption going on with some indication more demand goods for fall trade. Expect rather better market tomorrow. Futures in Liverpool are due tomorrow: July, 14.53c; October, 13.30c.—Hubbard & Company.

COTTON LETTER.

New York, June 19.—Cotton has been unusually sympathetic in the past few days to movements in the stock market and as stocks fluctuated cotton quotations followed largely in unison. The chief buyers were recent sellers covering for profit. Today's reports from Manchester indicate no further curtailment at present of Lancashire spinning. This stimulated demand somewhat. The market's action indicates digestion of the recent selling but as business in yarns and cloths is unimproved and weather over the belt is favorable for crop development it seems improbable that rallies will be sustained at this time but rather that the tendency will be to sell on strength and quotations feel the effect. Tomorrow's weekly weather report is expected to be the most favorable this season and it remains to be seen what effect it will have upon sentiment. July Liverpool due Wednesday 14.53.—Orvis Bros. & Co.

DECEMBER WHEAT GOES TO NEW LOW

Chicago, June 19.—Although rains in the spring crop belt had a bearish influence on the wheat market today, and December delivery touched a new low price record for the season, the effect was afterward counterbalanced by liberal purchasing for Europe. The market closed unsettled at a range varying from 1-2 to 3-8c advance, with July $1.07 1-4@1.07 3-8 and September $1.06 5-8@1.06 3-4. Corn showed 3-8@1 5-8c gain, oats 1-8@1-4c to 1-4@3-8c, and provisions 2 to 7c.

With moisture almost general throughout the northwest, where drought has been complained of, the wheat market underwent a decided setback in price soon after the opening. The fact that crop reports from the southwest were less bullish than has of late been the rule tended also to weaken values for the time being. On the other hand, the Liverpool market failed to reflect fully the severe fall which prices suffered yesterday on this side of the Atlantic and this circumstance helped to bring about a rally here. Corn strength counted further as a bullish factor in regard to wheat.

Upturns in the wheat market attained their best impetus, however, only after estimates were out that export interests had taken 800,000 to 1,000,000 bushels of new hard winter wheat today in addition to purchases yesterday that totaled 1,000,000 bushels. Bullish sentiment in the late trading was increased somewhat by indications that hedging sales had fallen off and by surmises that farmers might prove less anxious than usual to let go at the start of the season.

Corn and oats derived their strength from the fact that public elevators here have only 288,000 bushels of corn, and that rural offerings are meager.

Provisions at first lacked support, but later rose with holdings and grain.

Stock Exchange President Scouts Rumored Failures

BY R. L. BARNUM.

New York, June 19.—Selling pressure was resumed in the stock market during the early trading but support was forthcoming which checked the decline.

President Cromwell of the stock exchange when questioned regarding the rumored failures, said all of the names connected with these reports had been investigated and in each case it was found that there was absolutely no justification for the rumors.

It has been many a long day since Wall street has heard so much unwarranted unfavorable news. These false rumors justified the conclusion that the turn in the market was not far off. In the late trading there was some recovery in prices.

President Reynolds of the Continental and Commercial bank of Chicago, one of the largest institutions in the country, when asked his opinion on recent decline on the stock market, said:

"I see no reason for high grade stocks declining as they have. Labor is short, but it is fully employed at present high wages. The banking situation was never stronger. Money is plentiful.

"Money is plentiful and cheap

"Railroads are establishing new loading records every day and still have cars in reserve for a greater grain movement.

"The commodity price situation is satisfactory and merchandise is moving slowly.

"There is nothing in all pessimistic talk on the business situation."

Secretary Mellon sails for London this coming Saturday. Treasury officials insist that he is going merely for pleasure and rest.

Thomas W. Lamont, who returned from abroad today, insisted when he sailed several weeks ago, that his trip was for pleasure and rest and had absolutely nothing to do with the proposed Austrian loan.

European cables received shortly afterward, however, reported him in conference with bankers over the Austrian loan and during his absence this loan was successfully floated here and abroad.

It is understood here that during his absence, Secretary Mellon will hold conferences with important statesmen in England, France, Germany and Italy, finding out from them what might be done from this side to help world rehabilitation and giving them first-hand information regarding our limitations, political and otherwise.

This information will be a valuable asset for President Harding and Secretary Hughes in the late summer or early autumn.

President Harding is going to make several speeches on his western trip, upholding the railroad labor board, according to Washington forecasts, because railway executives and officials of labor unions are going to start a joint movement to have the railroad labor board abolished when congress meets.

In this part of the country, the best disinterested opinion will stand behind President Harding until a better plan has ben suggested for protecting the public against highly organized railway management and labor.

As yet, no law which will stand the test of the courts, has ever been proposed for taking away from the railroads the rights guaranteed by the constitution or for forcing unwilling labor to work.

The rail board has no legal power to enforce its decision because no way has ever been found to legally give the board such powers. But the board has enormous power in making fair decisions public.

Because of heavy overproduction of crude oil in California different grades are selling from 70c a barrel down to 35c, working hardships on small producers.

Well-informed oil people here predict that when the California oil situation clears up, small producing companies will be found in control of Standard Oil of California, California Petroleum and other Standard Oil interests.

Prices Show Better Tone In Stock Market Tuesday

DAY'S SUMMARY.

Today's total sales 1,066,300 shares.

Twenty industrials averaged 92.76, net gain, .12.

High 1923, 105.38; low, 92.64.

Twenty railroads averaged 81.74; net loss, .40.

High 1923, 90.63; low, 80.13.

New York, June 19.—Stock prices displayed a better tone in today's active dealings on the New York stock exchange but there were indications of frightened and forced liquidation and short selling throughout the day which gave the market a spotty appearance. Several of the leaders tumbled to new low records before sufficient buying support set in to stem the tide of selling orders.

Official denial of the widespread rumors that several brokerage houses were in financial difficulties did much to dispel the pessimism that was so prevalent in yesterday's late dealings. Speculators for the decline made repated assaults on the list but in many instances they encountered substantial buying orders placed on the belief that the recent reaction had been overdone and that technical conditions warranted a rally.

Oils were rather unstable because of unfavorable trade conditions, the Pan American issues, Texas Company, California Petroleum Producers and refiners, general asphalt and a number of others falling to new low prices for the year.

United States Steel touched another new low at 92 1-4 and then rallied to 92 7-8, up 1-4. Gulf States and Replogle Steels, Consolidated Gas, Cerro de Pasco and Kennecott Coppers, International Paper, Baldwin, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Central Leather were among the more than three score other stocks that sold at new minimum prices for the year, but all rallied before the close. Rails held up well in the first few hours of trading but they gave way in the afternoon reaction and many of them closed at net losses on the day. Chesapeake and Ohio, Lackawanna, Illinois Central, New Orleans, Texas and Mexico, and Norfolk and Southern dropped back 1 to 3 points.

Call money held at 5 per cent all day. The demand for time money and commercial paper was again quiet with no change in rates.

Foreign exchange rates showed marked improvement. Demand sterling advanced 5-16 to $4.62 5-16 and French francs climbed 7 1-2 points to 6.22 1-2 cents. German marks rallied from .0006 14, the extreme low established yesterday to .0009 3-8 cents.

DAILY STOCK FEATURE

By Leased Wire to Fenner & Beane, Atlanta.

Many copper stocks reacted to levels which are attractive from a long pull standpoint. High grade issues like Kennecott, Anaconda and Smelters yield from 7 to 9 per cent on the investment.

Southern Railway—Stock is being steadily liquidated according to well informed judges of the market. Many people feel that the advance from 21½ last November, to present levels of 38 has discounted most if not all the favorable developments of the past six months.

The decline of nearly 8 points in Md., to $38 occasioned considerable comment. A great many people were disappointed at the action of this issue as it was thought the stock would be heavily supported at $40 a share as the new stock issue is offered to stockholders at that figure.

LINER FOLLOWS BONE-DRY POLICY

New York, June 19.—The liner Majestic arrived today from Cherbourg bone-dry except for 36 gallons of brandy, required by British law for emergency medical use.

Although she had started with her usual smoking room supply of liquor and, in addition, private stocks which some passengers had bought in England, the entire supply was gone at 10 o'clock last night, before the 3-mile limit was reached, and there was none to be thrown overboard.

"It took the best efforts of the passengers to do it," said one ship's officer, "but we now have only the gallon of brandy for each 100 passengers and members of the crew and the regular supply for the lifeboats."

Members of the crew said the prospect of a dry voyage home was "terrible" but they said it with smiles that indicated they had hopes of one sort or another.

Avery, Hopwood, American playwright, who was one of the Majestic's passengers, claimed the record achievement on the trip across, declaring he had started with 25 quarts of chaimpagne, gin, vermouth and wine, and had reached the 3-mile limit just as his cabin went dry.

The bar steward declared that many passengers competed for the honor of taking the last drink in the stores. One man in particular, he said, boasted all the way over that he would have the last swallow, but he practiced so much on the last day that he was not even present at the end.

Germany Makes Protest to U. S. On French Policy

Washington, June 19.—Germany has presented another note to the United States protesting against alleged French terrorism in the Ruhr. The communication was presented to secretary of state Hughes by ambassador Wiedefeldt. It is regarded as a memorandum submitted as a matter of information only and requiring no reply from the United States.

"The German government has repeatedly proposed that unaccounted-for incidents shold be investigated by international commissions," the note states.

"The French government, however, has failed to reply to all such suggestions. Against such attitude and against the incessant French policy of terrorism the German government raises protest and announces to the world that the responsibility for any consequences rest alone with the French government."

Rockefeller Donates $150,000 to Advance Insulin Treatment

New York, June 19.—John D. Rockefeller has donated $150,000 to various hospitals to aid in advancing the insulin treatment for diabetes.

The purpose of the gifts, Mr. Rockefeller said, would be to increase the number of free ward patients who could be treated with insulin and to teach physicians in general practice the proper methods of employing insulin in the treatment of diabetes.

With the exception of the Presbyteian hospital, in New York, which will receive $15,000 and the University of Toronto Banting-Best fund, which will receive $5,000, the gifts were of $10,000 each.

THEATERS :-: MOVIES

Forsyth Theater—All week, Forsyth Players in "Some Baby."

Loew's Grand Theater—(Vaudeville and pictures). See advertising for program.

Howard Theater—All week, Bebe Daniels in "The Exciters," and other screen features.

"Some Baby."

(At the Forsyth.)

Its successive successful seasons at the Fulton and Knickerbocker theaters in New York were never marked by more warmly appreciative audiences than those which have applauded "Some Baby," at the Forsyth theater at its first three performances this week. Heralded as a sure relief from the boredom of summer weather, the speedy farce comedy has outdone its promise and has sent Forsyth patrons home chuckling to themselves. The ridiculous results of feeding a supposed elixir of eternal youth to an old man and to a young girl are irresistible exciters of laughter.

Metropolitan Theater—All week, Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood."

Rialto Theater—All week, Agnes Ayers in "The Heart Raider," and other screen features.

Tudor Theater—Wednesday, Priscilla Dean in "The Flame of Life," and other screen features.

Alamo No. 2—Wednesday and Thursday, Constance Talmadge in "The Primitive Lover."

Alpha Theater—Wednesday, Wm. Farnum in "Shackles of Gold."

"Mammy."

(At Loew's Grand.)

"Mammy" and the Gold Dust twins, the feature act which has delighted audiences at Loew's Grand theatre since the first of the week, will close its Atlanta engagement with today's and tonight's performances. "Mammy" is a black-face performer of immense dimensions, who proves that she knows how to sing blues and jazz songs. She has the two gold dust twins with her who assist in the entertainment with whistling duets and eccentric dancing. The act has proved very popular with audiences at Loew's and encores are demanded at every performance.

Other offerings that close tonight are Wilson and Jerome in bright vaudeville bits, the Fay Rash trio in a comedy skit with harmony songs, Charles Martin, the cowboy baritone, and Holden and Graham in smoke and shadowgraphs.

The feature of the screen program is Florence Vidor in "Dust to Dawn."

"The Exciters."

(At the Howard.)

"Bebe Daniels has never been better than she is in "The Exciters," and Antonio Moreno is adding new laurels and geting hundreds of new admirers by his splendid acting in this vehicle in which he co-stars with the beautiful Bebe.

"The Exciters" is the story of a girl who is constantly in search of excitement and thrills.

Her folks have picked the man that she is to marry, but like most parent picked futures, Bebe as Ronnie Rand did not like Pierre Martel (played by Antonio Moreno), whom she met after she had crashed to the ground in a big seaplane. To satisfy her parents' wishes she marries Pierre when she thinks that she is on her deathbed. Imediately after the marriage she is informed that her husband is a member of a notorious band of criminals. So, after a series of thrilling escapades and a smashing climax, everthing is settled and things run along smoothly.

Douglas Fairbanks.

(At the Metropolitan.)

William Lowery, who plays the part of the Sheriff of Notingham in Douglas Fairbanks' latest screen sensation, "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," a United Artists release this week at the Metropolitan theater, was born in St. Louis in 1885. His stage carer practicaly began at the same time, for both his father and mother were of the acting profession. His first part, however, came at the age of 9 with Richard Mansfield.

In 1901 he enlisted in the army and was sent to China during the Boxer uprising. He had the distinction of being one of the three first soldiers to scale the wall and raise the American flag. For this act of bravery he was commissioned a second lieutenant.

Sensational Libel Suit Holds Stage in Thomasville Court

Thomasville, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—The sensational damage suit for $50,000 brought by Homer Williams, chairman of Thomas county commissioners, against Dr. T. M. McIntosh, one of Thomasville's oldest and best known physicians, for alleged libel, occupied the attention of the city court part of yesterday and today has not yet been finished. The plaintiff is attempting to show that both in print and by circulars Dr. McIntosh has reflected upon his character and public acts in his office as chairman of commissioners. Many witnesses have been summoned to show the fallacy of the charges.

Dr. McIntosh claims that he can prove his charges. He claims that in the dull season of 1921 when many sawmill men were anxious to lend their mules to the county for their feed, Mr. Williams, who is also a sawmill man, declined to take them, but hired mules belonging to men financed by him, thus costing the county a large sum.

He charged that Mr. Williams sold lumber to the county for large prices. He also charged Mr. Williams with offering to sell land owned by him for a county stockade at $100 an acre.

This case has been taken up mainly without examining the many witnesses on both sides, principally sawmill men. Much documentary evidence has been brought up on both sides.

The plaintiff is represented by Titus & Dekle and the defense by H. J. McIntyre, Alexander, Burch & Andrews, and E. K. Wilcox, of Valdosta. Large crowds have attended the trial and sentiment in the case is divided. It will be continued tomorrow.

LEVIATHIAN SAILS ON TRIAL TRIP

Boston, June 19.—The great liner Leviathan sailed this afternoon on her trial trip to southern waters with several hundred guests of the shipping board. Thick weather deprived persons on the mainland who had trained their glasses on her anchorage in the lower harbor of the opportunity of seeing her departure, but shipping board officials gave word that she had started at the appointed time.

Injunction proceedings to prevent the trip failed to materialize notwithstanding reports that they might be brought.

$125,000 ADDITION TO BIG PLANT PLANNED

Erection of a $125,000 addition to the present building of the Winchester-Simmons company at Oakland City is planned at once, it was learned Tuesday when officials of the Burdette Realty company announced that it had leased the proposed extension for the Massell Realty company to the hardware concern for ten years at an aggregate rental of $122,500.

According to Arthur Burdette, the addition will contain 60,000 square feet of floor space, giving the tenant a total of 130,000 square feet.

The addition will be three stories high, of mill construction. Massell Construction company will build it.

Rapid growth of the volume of business handled by the Winchester-Simmons company necessitated the acquisition of more space, officials said. The original unit, consisting of a five story building, was leased to the Winchester Repeating Arms company before that concern merged with the Simmons Hardware company, which has headquarters at St. Louis.

The Burdette Realty company handled the lease on the present building for Mr. Massell, who later sold it to out-of-town clients.

Theunis Expects To Present New Cabinet Thursday

Brusseels, June 19.—(By the Associated Press.) — Premier Theunis, whose ministry resigned last week because of the differences arising over the introduction of the Flemish language in the University of Ghent, expects to present a new cabinet on Thursday to King Albert, who has asked M. Theunis to form a new ministry.

No socialist will be included in the reorganized cabinet because, it is explained in political quarters, the last socialist congress declared for a conquest of power through the class struggle, was opposed to an energetic policy toward Germany and favored a drastic reduction in the term of military service.

WIFE IDENTIFIES 'SMILING SLAYER'

Chicago, June 19.—Woman or man, Mrs. Frances Carrick, also known as Fred G. Thompson, was identified today by Mrs. Richard C. Tesmer as the supposed man bandit who shot and instantly killed her husband in a holdup on June 5.

First supposed to be a man disguised as a woman, the prisoner was declared by Frank Carrick, who with two others was arrested with the accused, to have lived as his wife for 14 years.

Known as Mrs. Carrick, the suspect, in the opinion of the police, led a double life as both man and woman, masquerading as one or the other at different times.

The suspect was identified by the smiling expression which Mrs. Tesmer said the bandit assumed until almost the instant of firing the shot that killed Tesmer.

DIAL SEEKS PARDON FOR BEAUFORT MAYOR

Washington, June 19.—Executive clemency for Mayor R. V. Bray of Beaufort, S. C., recently sentenced to a year's imprisonment in Atlanta penitentiary and to pay a $1,000 fine for an assault on a federal revenue agent, is being sought by Senator Dial, of that state, through conferences with department of justice officials, it was revealed in a statement today by the South Carolina senator.

Claiming the penalty imposed on Bray by Federal Judge H. A. M. Smith was "cruel, unusual and excessive," Senator Dial declared he hoped to convince department officials that the sentence was out of proportion, and to have a report in the hands of President Harding in time for possible action before he starts on his western trip.
